Power Is Dangerous.
Some Capable Old Men.
Calf Helps Salamander.
A Taste of War.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

TOLLING BELLS all over Germany told the people that von Hindenburg was dead. Newspapers told them that Hitler had stepped into the place of the old fighting general. In a few days Germany will go through the form of confirming Hitler's assumption of power.

This puts Hitler in the dangerous position of a man exercising absolute control, with no check upon his decisions. It takes a Mussolini, Kemal Pasha, or Stalin to hold that kind of job long. Hitler will now show whether he ranks with the "big three" in dictatorship. Power is dangerous to its possessor and those controlled by it.

THE BEST DESCRIPTION of the late old general and field marshal is supplied by Lloyd George in an article on von Hindenburg issued by Universal Service the day before Hindenburg died.

Foch said of Ludendorff that he was un bon soldat, "a good soldier."

"Then," says Lloyd George, "I asked him, 'What about von Hindenburg?' He replied, 'Un grand patriote,' a great patriot."

Hindenburg was a great patriot, devoted to his country. What he was in war, how important his courage in establishing the "Hindenburg line," is described in Lloyd George's article. The best brief description is "a great patriot."

Lloyd George, referring to Nazis and Germany's "inchoate fanaticism," says of Hindenburg, "He cannot fairly be held responsible for events of the past years."

OLDER MEN, who in this country are often looked upon as "too old" at fifty and sixty, will be interested in this paragraph from Lloyd George's article, "When Paul von Hindenburg was called upon to take command, he was in his seventieth year. His great French antagonist, Clemenceau, was close to his eightieth year. The octogenarian won."

Sixty-three years ago, in the war of 1870-1871, von Hindenburg fought as a young officer, while Clemenceau was Mayor of Mont Martre. He helped organize the defense of Paris, and von Hindenburg, as a lieutenant in the Prussian Guards, rode through the Arch of Triumph, when Paris surrendered, passing over the spot where the Unknown French Soldier now lies buried.

When there is work to be done, the old still play a part of some consequence.

DR. BARTH at Columbia University has successfully used cephalin, "a clear fatty substance" from the brain of a calf, in "organizing" the nervous system of a salamander.

The salamander and calf are far apart. The salamander belongs in the caroniferous era; evolutionists say you have five fingers because the salamander had five toes. Mathematicians and musicians tell you it would have been better for you if the salamander had had six toes. Then you would have had six fingers, which would have given us the duo-decimal system in arithmetic, and a better hand for violin and guitar. The cephalin from the calf's brain is an extract which exists in all brains. What interests scientists is the fact that the salamander's ability to utilize the calf's cephalin in its nervous system proves that there is "a common basis for the nervous systems of creatures as far apart as cattle and salamanders."

ALL LIVING THINGS seem to be related; perhaps there is only one kind of "consciousness" or intelligence, its power depending on the mental instrument through which it expresses itself, just as there is only one kind of music, and harmony, depending for its excellence on the instrument provided.

Paderewski or Paganini could not play well on a piano or violin out of tune.

SOMEBODY, PERHAPS "by mistake," inflicted a mysterious minor "gas attack" that prostrated 150 residents of Humahsien in Manchukuo. Japanese authorities suggest that Russian Army men inadvertently "loosed the gas in chemical warfare maneuvers across the Amur River."

The 150 residents of Humah-

CHANCELLOR HITLER . . . FROM CORPORAL TO COMMANDER

Knickerbocker Reveals How Hitler Won Army, Prevented Massacre

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

International News Service.

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—Why the German army accepted Hitler and let a one-time corporal appoint himself commander-in-chief was explained for the first time today by information hitherto unrevealed and possessing historical importance.

It makes clear what was not clear yesterday because, with all the reasons that could be adduced for the passivity of the Reichswehr on the death of Hindenburg and for their willingness to swear the oath of allegiance to Hitler, many persons were surprised that the army so easily gave up its last chance to obtain a commander-in-chief of its own choosing.

HITLER'S SUCCESS

It is consequently also explained why Hitler was able to get all the power in his hands and thus usher in a new period of German history.

Finally it is information which would have added to the creditability of Hitler's account of the Roehm conspiracy, but which had to be withheld from the German public for discretionary reasons.

Simply put, the information is this:

That for 10 days before June 30, when Hitler put down the Storm Troops' revolt, the general staff of the army carried their service revolvers. Generals and colonels of the Prussian army do not usually go armed. For those 10 days every man in the Reichswehr ministry had strapped to his side a heavy automatic with extra clips of cartridges.

MASSACRE PLOTTED

They carried guns because they had learned that the Storm Troopers planned to kill them in what would have been the most extraordinary massacre in modern political history—a massacre with a counterpart to be found no more recently than the days of the Roman emperors when the Praetorian guards sometimes surprised and slaughtered the general staff of the Legionnaires.

MURDER PLANNED

The central element in Roehm's plot was indeed to be a surprise attack on the Reichswehr ministry. Karl Ernst, group leader of 250,000 Storm Troops in Berlin, had picked 20,000 shock troops to occupy the center of Berlin and the government quarters on the afternoon of June 30. Out of this 20,000 a selected number of the most reliable men were chosen as a murder squad.

This squad, after the Reichswehr ministry had been sur-

REICH TENSE UNDER NAZI DICTATOR

Reports of Frontier Troop Movements Add to Unrest

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—Germany gazed across the bier of her dead President today into an uncertain future of super-Hitlerism.

Complexities within the Fatherland and without confronted Adolf Hitler, the corporal who, by the death of the aged Paul von Hindenburg yesterday, has become master of the destinies of 65,000,000 Germans.

The "free plebiscite" he has ordered to be held August 19 to determine a successor to von Hindenburg is, as all Germans recognize, but a ceremony. It will rubber stamp Hitler's assumption of presidential powers in addition to those he exercises as Chancellor.

GERMANS BEWILDERED

Many Germans seem bewildered over the suddenness of events, even though nothing unexpected has occurred.

It was considered that the Chancellor would take the presidency when von Hindenburg died, and that he would seek quickly to gain the allegiance of the army, which was Hindenburg's chief reliance.

The Nazis, however, have moved with a nice regard for public reaction. Hitler's declination of the title of President because it "is indissolubly bound up with the name of the great deceased," is regarded as a decision calculated to retain public support.

Nazis are jubilant, too, over the army and navy's pledge of allegiance to Hiter, which was made before nightfall yesterday. These units of armed force were the most likely threat to Hitler and Nazilism, and now they are bound to him by their solemn word.

CZECHO-SLOVAKS MASS

There are reports that Czecho-Slovakian troops are concentrating on their frontier, fearing a movement involving Germans. Czecho-Slovakia has watched carefully the situation in Austria, with its undercurrent of German involvement.

Other reports that lack confirmation due to a tight censorship say German soldiers are gathered at the Austrian border.

Much of the financial load the realigned Hitler administration must carry will be laid on the shoulders of Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, who was named acting minister of economics succeeding Dr. Kurt Schmitt, who is retiring because of ill health.

Germany mourns the late President von Hindenburg not alone for the quality of his services to the Fatherland, but as a churchman, conservative and patriot who formed a tangible tie with the past.

That tie is now gone. Instead there is a dictator who, despite

British War 'Secrets' Stolen

International News Service.

PORTSMOUTH, England, Aug. 3.—Great Britain mobilized her police and her secret service forces today in an effort to solve the mystery of the disappearance of important admiralty documents said to have contained naval secrets that would have been of great value to certain foreign powers.

The disappearance of the documents was discovered when a train arrived here from London. The news caused a sensation throughout the entire nation.

The Evening Standard stated:

"It is understood that the documents are of supreme importance to a foreign power."

The papers concerned, it was reported, tests that have been made of new naval vessels and guns. Details of these tests have been closely guarded by the admiralty.

It was stated the documents were shipped in a red box, which was carried in the compartment occupied by the train guards. The train stopped at 16 stations between the Waterloo Station in London and the depot here.

Scotland Yard was immediately notified and began an investigation. A horde of secret service agents also were immediately assigned to the case.

LONG'S 'ARMY' DEFIES COURT

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Surrounded by the guns of the mobilized National Guard at Jackson Barracks, Adjt. Gen. Raymond H. Fleming today replied to a civil district court order for dismissal of the troops by directing his officers to fortify their positions.

Sentries at the gateway of the barracks refused the civil Sheriff access to the commander of the state militia when they sought to serve the court order on him, and Fleming, over the telephone, told newsmen:

"I shall carry out the Governor's orders. I have given my officers orders to fortify their positions."

The court order calling for demobilization of the troops, summoned to duty in the bitter factional dispute between the political forces of Senator Huey P. Long and Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, of New Orleans, was secured late yesterday by city attorneys.

The civil Sheriff and the chief of police served Long as "a conspirator" with the court summons last night, but were unable to similarly serve the adjutant general.

Platinum Blonde, 5, Gets Hollywood Role

Fay Chaldecott, 5, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Chaldecott, of the British stage, was assigned a role in "David Copperfield." Fay is a native of Hollywood.

Perry, Tennis Star, To Marry Actress

LONDON, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The Mail announced last night the engagement of Fred Perry, world's No. 1 ranking tennis player, to Mary Lawson, British actress and film star.

The marriage will take place after Perry's forthcoming tour of the United States and Australia.

DEATH, RUIN IN WAKE OF STORM

City Lashed by Gale; Trees Uprooted; Towns Dark

A mounting death list and a trail of wreckage which represented millions of dollars led from Western Pennsylvania and the Great Lakes region throughout the East today as mute evidence of last night's rain, wind and electrical storm. The toll:

1—Countless towns in Western Pennsylvania suffered great damage, especially in the Shenango Valley. Crops were ruined, telephone service was down, cellars were flooded and fires were numerous in the wake of lightning bolts.

2—Lake Erie had claimed the lives of five fishermen, it was feared. Two bodies were recovered while hope was given for three Youngstown residents who left Ashtabula in a rowboat. (Story on Page 33).

3—Terrific gales lifted a Buffalo to Cleveland airplane from 4,000 to 14,000 feet and dashed it toward the earth again before the pilot gained control to save the lives of himself and two passengers. (Story on Page 33).

4—High tides marooned Bridgeton, N. J.; a twister wreaked havoc at Hickory Point, Md., and nine persons were dead in Eastern Michigan.

In Butler County a motorist was killed when a tree, falling across the Hendersonville road, west of Mars, forced his auto off the road. He was Orville R. Wagner, 23, of Baden. Two persons riding with him were injured.

3 STUNNED BY BOLT

At Conneaut Lake three persons were stunned by a bolt of lightning. Lights were dark in the town of Conneaut Lake for three hours.

GIRL AVIATOR'S ESCORT SHOT

International News Service.

DETROIT, Aug. 3.—Pretty Margaret Spitz, 18-year-old girl aviator, known as Detroit's "flying deputy sheriff," today was the center of a shooting affray which may bring her father, Earl, 42, to trial on a murder charge.

Spitz attempted to end the romance of Margaret and Earl Urquhart, 24, by critically wounding the latter. Spitz was in jail on a charge of assault with intent to kill. If Urquhart dies Spitz will face a charge of homicide.

According to the stories told the prosecutor's office, Spitz found his daughter in Urquhart's company and ordered her to go home. The two men came to blows and Spitz fired.

'Cauliflower Ear' Handicap to Raft

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—George Raft, film actor, resorted to plastic surgery today to improve his left ear, injured several years ago when he was a boxer. Raft said the injury did not matter much when he was playing underworld roles, but now that things are changing in the film world he will have to play different parts.

Anna Dall Denies Troth

ANNA ROOSEVELT DALL

SISTIE, BUZZIE JOIN FATHER

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, daughter of the President, today brought her two children to Chicago and turned them over to their father, Curtis B. Dall, whom she divorced in Minden, Nev., Monday.

The transfer of "Sistie" and "Buzzie" from custody of one parent to the other was effected adroitly, though publicly. Dall will have the children for a "couple of weeks" and then they will return to their mother.

No camera recorded the transfer and the Dalls were at some pains to see that they did not meet personally.

"Sistie" and "Buzzie" came into Chicago from the West with their mother, their nurse, Katy, and Benjamin Rich of the United States Secret Service.

"Sistie," highly excited little girl of 7, with a number of teeth missing from her Roosevelt smile, came down the platform tugging Katy's hand and then wiggled into her father's arms. "Buzzie" trotted solemnly along beside Secret Service Agent Rich.

Said Papa Dall:

"Hello, young fellow."

"Buzzie" took a tighter grip on the big stuffed animal he was carrying and the whole party went pell-mell down the main stairway to a government automobile and sped away.

In checked tweed traveling coat and a little crushed tyrol hat, Mrs. Dall left the train and was put into another government car. She will take an afternoon train for Washington. Mrs. Dall said:

"There is nothing to the rumor that I am engaged to marry a Washington newspaperman. I am going to work. I have more than the usual amount of writing and radio work to do while my mother is away."

Dall said that "Buzzie" and "Sistie" will remain in Chicago for a few days and visit the fair.

2 INMATES CHARGE BEATING

Superintendent Built 'Jail' at Aslyum, Prosecutor Says

BUTLER, Pa., Aug. 3.—Alleged mistreatment of inmates at the Butler County Home will be investigated by a grand jury next month, District Attorney Edgar H. Negley announced today.

Negley's move follows two charges of assault and battery lodged against Fred C. Herold, superintendent of the home, by two aged male wards of the county.

SILENT ON CHARGES

The latest charge was made yesterday before Alderman Porter Scott by A. W. Dortmas, 85, who alleges he was locked in Herold's newly made "jail room" at the home and held for two days without water. Herold previously had waived a hearing on assault charges preferred by Peter Z. Ross, 65.

Herold has refused to discuss the charges. His sponsor for the post, which he assumed last April, is County Commissioner Edward R. Turner. Turner also refused to comment.

Prosecutor Negley said:

"After several complaints had been made to me by old people at the home I personally went to the home and interviewed about 40 inmates. The result of this inquiry convinced me that a grand jury investigation should be made of conditions there.

TELLS OF "JAIL"

"It appears that Herold constructed a "jail" by placing heavy wire inside and outside one of the rooms where inmates are placed for detention. There is nothing in the law providing for discipline at a county poor home. Anyone committing an offense should be turned over to the county for prosecution the same as anyone else.

"The home now cares for about 33 women and 103 men as well as a few children temporarily. One old man told me he was put in the 'jail' because he wouldn't dig a grave on July 4.

LIGHTS PREVENT GIRL'S LEAP

Police and firemen were summoned when the girl clambered to a neighbor's roof intent upon leaping to the ground. As the firemen placed a ladder to reach her, a life net was spread to catch her.

But the fascination of the lights permitted firemen to reach her side unnoticed.

The girl, according to police, will be turned over to Juvenile Court. She recently returned from an Allentown hospital, police said.

M'NAIR FAILS TO REACH DECISION ON TUBE TOLLS

PWA PROGRAM WAITS ACTION BY MAYOR

Authority Members Deny Dropping Projects

Mayor McNair today listened to a debate on the Liberty Tubes toll proposal, then delayed announcing whether he would approve the Allegheny County Authority-Public Works Administration consent ordinance.

Before he went to the Henry George Club luncheon to hear the debate, the Mayor said he'd make up his mind after the meeting. But after he had listened to E. N. Hunting, vice chairman of the Authority, and Attorney A. C. Purdy, solicitor for Dormont, argue the question, he put off the decision.

SEES 5-CENT TOLL

He said he was going back to his office to talk with Fred C. Bigger and Leslie M. Johnston, public works director, before announcing what he'd do.

Hunting told his audience the toll probably would be five cents. He emphasized the Authority's program, based on a loan of $24,500,000 from the government, would provide work for 12,000.

DENIES DROPPING PROJECTS

"In all recent drafts of this loan agreement and trust indenture, and in the latest drafts which are now being given final consideration, the following bridge and highway improvements are specifically listed: Banksville road, Fort Duquesne Toll Bridge and Tunnels, Liberty Tube plaza (toll), Pittsburgh-Homestead High Level Toll Bridge, Highland Park Toll Bridge, Pittsburgh River front improvements (toll), Glenwood Toll Bridge, Jerome Street Toll Bridge, and Jerome street improvement.

"It has never been the intention, nor even been considered, to eliminate either Banksville road improvement or Fort Duquesne Bridge and tunnels; such elimination is not now being considered, and will not be considered in the future. Any reports, insinuations or rumors to the contrary are certainly false."

DEATH, RUIN DUE TO STORM

service was reduced to a minimum, several fires were reported and farmers suffered heavy damage to crops.

At Slippery Rock lightning and wind felled big trees across highways and traffic was blocked through the night, especially along the Mercer road.

In Cambria County, hundreds of big shade trees were uprooted near Ebensburg, the roofs of cottages were ripped off and telephone wires were torn.

HOUSES UNROOFED

Kittanning and Crawford County were hard hit. Houses were unroofed, power lines disrupted and several buildings were reported shaken from their foundations.

In Blair County streets were flooded, and property damage was heavy in Altoona. Pedestrians wore hip boots and travelers were escorted from the Pennsylvania Railroad to hotels on baggage trucks.

Sharon district experienced its worst electrical and rain storm in seven years when a near-tornado hit Mercer County with unprecedented fury, causing more than $200,000 property and crop damage.

Greenville was the hardest hit, where lightning struck three houses, while driving rain and gale-like winds wrecked crops and uprooted trees.

A high wind which swept Stoneboro's lake front damaged the bathhouse and dance pavilion. Grove City's swimming pool was struck and the filtration plant damaged. In Farrell, lightning hit a school house.

PLANE FORCED DOWN

An American Airways plane, flying with two passengers from Buffalo to Cleveland, was forced down near Brookville by the storm. The pilot, Eddie Dryer, said the storm blew him off his course, lifted his plane from 4,000 to 14,000 feet and then smacked it toward the earth. His controls were of no use, but he finally sighted Brookville and leveled off to a safe landing at the airport there.

The 400 block in North Craig street suffered considerable damage as a plate glass window, valued at $200, was broken in the Dykema Company. A signboard, valued at $300, was blown down and a tree uprooted. Broken windows and uprooted trees were reported from many other sections.

Firemen spread a tarpaulin over the roof of the three-story brick dwelling of Mrs. J. Miller, 1537 Hoff street, North Side, when the wind lifted a large section of the roof.

Mrs. Houdini Shows How To Escape

The Pacific Coast Association of Magicians is meeting here, and Jimmy Muir, hotel manager, thought he would turn the tables on them by trapping Mrs. Houdini and six other delegates in an elevator.

Mrs. Houdini

Muir pulled a switch and the elevator stopped between the third and fourth floors. Soon, however, the seven magicians came walking down the stairs.

Mrs. Houdini herself had contrived their escape by sending William Harkness, an escape artist, through the elevator trapdoor, enabling him to free them.

BISHOP INJURED IN FATAL CRASH

International News Service.

BORDENTOWN, N. J., Aug. 3.—While the Right Rev. Phillip Cook, Episcopal bishop of Wilmington, Del., was fighting for his life in St. Francis Hospital, Trenton, today, plans were being made here for an inquest to determine responsibility for the automobile accident last night in which Harriet Cook, 19, the clergyman's daughter, met her death.

Bishop Cook and another daughter, Josephine, 20, were said to be in critical condition at the Trenton Hospital.

An automobile in which the bishop and his two daughters were riding collided with a truck driven by Earl Crawford, of Sutton lane, Shelton, N. J.

According to police, the Cook car attempted to pass the truck but skidded on the wet road and crashed into it.

Crawford, who was unhurt, was arrested on a technical charge of manslaughter. The Cook car, police said, was driven by Josephine Cook.

War of Judges Marks Payne Hearing

Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 3.—As amazing a spectacle as ever marked California court procedure was enacted here when three Superior judges attempted to take over control of the sanity hearing of Louis R. Payne, convicted double slayer.

Judge Collier

The strange scene came as a climax to the drawn-out controversy between Judge Harry F. Sewell, originally assigned to hear the case of the youth convicted of murdering his mother and younger brother, and Presiding Superior Judge Frank O. Collier.

Judge Sewell, in defiance of an order of the presiding judge, assumed the bench and attempted to resume the taking of testimony in the Payne sanity hearing.

Then Judge Reuben S. Schmidt, named Wednesday as substitute jurist for the hearing, entered Judge Sewells courtroom and directed removal of defendant, jury and case records to his own court.

Judge Sewell immediately declared a mistrial in the Payne case. Then Judge Fletcher Bowron, presiding criminal jurist, ascended Judge Sewell's bench and declared null and void all orders and actions of Judge Sewell.

Later, in another courtroom, the sanity hearing of the convicted slayer got under way.

GAY WELCOME HOME GIVEN ROOSEVELT

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 3.—From his idyllic cruise in Caribbean and Pacific waters, President Roosevelt returned today to continental United States and the grim realities of governmental problems—strikes, drought and the ever-pressing question of unemployment, which is as severe in this Northwest country as anywhere.

The cruiser Houston, which has been the floating White House for a month, steamed slowly up the Columbia River this morning to anchor at this inland port, where a great welcome awaited him. Mr. Roosevelt is the first President to visit Portland since the late Warren G. Harding, and the whole Northwest collaborated to give him a show worthy of the historic event.

In contrast with conditions that obtained a few weeks ago, the Pacific Coast, from Los Angeles to Seattle, represented relative industrial peace on the President's arrival today.

The strikes are ended, but the bitterness lingers on. Recognizing that fact, extraordinary efforts were made today to guard Mr. Roosevelt upon his arrival.

The President's choice of debarkation points was not casually made. He chose Portland because in this far Northwest country are projects that lie close to his heart—the Bonneville power and navigation development and the great power and irrigation project in the Coulee region of Washington.

FIND FAKE BOMB IN POSTOFFICE

Discovered on the lobby floor of the North Side Postoffice, a fake bomb was turned over to police late today by Assistant Superintendent C. W. Crede.

The "bomb", composed of a foot-long piece of rubber hose filled with what police said was dirt and slag, and wrapped in a magazine, old newspapers and wrapping paper, with tire-patch seals, was found by a customer and placed on the parcel post desk, according to Crede. An employe, becoming suspicious of the package, turned it over to his superiors, who called police.

Written on the outside of the magazine, police said, was reference to two marked articles entitled "Will Gangs Rule the World?" and "Soak the Rich." The "bomb" was said by police to be the work of a crank.

"She took it like a Girl Scout—without a whimper. Although painful, the operation was not serious."

SCHOOL CENSOR FOR MOVIES PROPOSED

Parent-Teacher Plan Gives Communities Local Control

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Local school boards would be made responsible for motion pictures shown to children in their communities under a plan promulgated today by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Also, leaders of the organization contended, motion pictures for the recreation and instruction of youth "should be produced, distributed and exhibited by educators, dramatists and playwrights of professional standing, instead of those motivated solely by a desire for personal profit."

Outlining a three-year plan to be submitted to state groups of the organization, Mrs. Robbins Gilman, national chairman of motion pictures, said its purpose was to "focus the influence of 20,000 local parent-teachers groups upon realizing the potential good to be derived from motion pictures."

She stressed that the movement should be kept entirely apart from commercialism.

Recommendation was made that "local boards of education be made responsible for providing and administering leisure time opportunities for children."

Five purposes were set forth:

In production, to secure "suitable motion pictures for instruction, culture and entertainment."

In distribution, to encourage establishment of motion picture libraries from which films may be secured for school and community showings.

In exhibition, to arrange for educational showings in schools, churches and community auditoriums.

In supervision, to extend authority of school boards over leisure time opportunities for children.

In legislation, to support trade practice control measures, such as regulation of blind booking and block booking.

Mrs. Gilman explained the plan as follows:

'The parent-teacher organization will co-operate with institutions of education and governmental departments to secure improvement in the selection and treatment of subject matter used in motion picture production.

"We shall not co-operate with companies conducting recreation for profit, either by previewing or by listing theatrical films in any connection."

mane treatment. While it is impossible to conduct such an institution to suit all those cared for, I feel that the charges made in this case warrant a complete investigation. Politics has nothing whatsoever to do with it."

FEUD LINKED

Negley said that he went to the poor farm on Tuesday to investigate the complaints and was told, in three words, just what he could do.

He said he was refused the records and not allowed to talk with any of the inmates alone.

There was a feud between Dortmas, who has filed charges against Herold, and the superintendent, Negley related.

DOOR NAILED SHUT

The District Attorney reported that they quarreled frequently over whether a door leading from the men's dormitory to the lawn should be locked. Dortmas holding out for an open door.

Each time Dortmas unlocked the door he was tossed into the "jail," Negley said. Once the door was nailed shut and Dortmas promptly withdrew the nails, the prosecutor added, and received the unusual punishment.

2-JOB PROBE LINKS COYNE

A mysterious visit by two State Department of Revenue investigators was said today to have followed reports that a "two-job" alderman and his constable were drawing pay from the inheritance tax office.

Proteges of State Senator James J. Coyne, according to one report, the alderman and his aide performed no service at the tax office and went there only on pay day.

Walter Mayhew, chief clerk of the inheritance tax office here, admitted investigators had been checking up on the work done by individual employes, but refused further information.

After scrutinizing the payroll, the investigators were said to have returned to Harrisburg.

Horse Survives Plunge Over Cliff

LIVINGSTON, Mont.—(INS.)—City Highway Engineer E. B. Hubard thought he had seen the last of his favorite mount when his saddle horse, which he had been leading along a snow-filled trail high up on Daisy pass on the Red Lodge-Cooke city road, disappeared over the brink of a 400-foot precipice.

He peered over the edge of the cliff, to see the animal scramble to his feet unhurt.

Aimed at Target But Bathers Fled

ALIQUIPPA, Pa., Aug. 3.—F. B. Mackinowski, a farmer, was advised by Justice of the Peace Charles Hayward to get a safer place for his target practice. Mackinowski was discharged when he told the Justice he was shooting at a target after swimmers in Raccoon Creek complained the bullets drove them from the creek.

WIFE NO. 1 GETS STUB FROM BANCROFT

Actor Won't Speak to Her at Meeting in Support Suit

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—For the first time in many years George Bancroft, he-man screen actor, has met his first wife, the former Edna G. Brothers, actress, who contends she is still the filmster's legal mate, despite his marriage to another woman.

The meeting occurred yesterday in a downtown building—the office of S. S. Hahn, attorney for the first Mrs. Bancroft.

Although he refused to speak to her, Bancroft got up from his chair "like a gentleman" she later said, when she entered the room.

EX-WIFE PLEASED

At the close of an hour's deposition in the suit filed by the first Mrs. Bancroft for separate maintenance, the actor left and she told her attorney:

"Yes, I'm satisfied with the interview."

The first Mrs. Bancroft charged in her complaint the actor failed to obtain a divorce from her before marrying Octavia Broske, opera singer, with whom he is now living in Santa Monica and who is the mother of their 17-year-old daughter. Mrs. Edna Bancroft amended the complaint yesterday, naming Mrs. Octavia Broske Bancroft as co-respondent.

The first Mrs. Bancroft listened while the 52-year-old actor told about his life since 1917, the year in which Mrs. Edna Bancroft charged she was deserted.

WIFE HIS MANAGER

Describing his second wife as his "manager," Bancroft was quoted by Hahn as saying he knew nothing about his financial affairs. He said all the money and property were handled by her.

Bancroft was quoted by Hahn as saying in the deposition:

"I met Octavia Broske when we were rehearsing 'Papa's Boy' in 1914 in the East. I left Edna shortly afterward while I was playing in 'Plain Woman' with Miss Broske.

Bancroft obtained a divorce from the first Mrs. Bancroft in New York, Hahn quoted the actor as saying. Hahn said Bancroft did not remember exactly when, but it was shortly before the second marriage. He did "not know where the divorce papers are, for I lived in a trunk for 17 years."

MR. MORGENTHAU, Secretary of the Treasury, announces $50,000,000 in silver certificates to be issued as soon as possible. Back of them will be "free silver" in the Treasury. The Treasury has 62,000,000 ounces of silver, for which it paid something more than $47,000,000. It is handed out in paper, on a basis of $1.29 per ounce. Good profit. Now, the problem for the average citizen is how to transfer some of those fifty million silver certificates to his own pocketbook.

SIDNEY TELLER, OTHERS JOIN PROTEST

'Nothing Wrong,' View Of Leaders Defending Scanty Apparel

Shorts are still "out," and shirts are still on in the city parks today.

While the ban on scanty apparel remained, community leaders throughout Pittsburgh expressed their disapproval of the rule which has resulted in the ousting of short-clad girls from city tennis courts and the arrest of shirtless youths in Schenley Park.

Sidney A. Teller, director of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement, when asked his opinion of the situation, replied:

"We allow girls to wear shorts on our playground, and that expresses our attitude. We left to their discretion their apparel for various activities, and they seem to have used good judgment.

"I don't believe the appearance of a young girl should be brought to her attention. It makes her self-conscious, and she begins to believe that in wearing shorts she has done something vulgar and indecent."

The head of the Boy Scouts in Allegheny County, Irwin D. Wolf, asserted his stand by saying:

"I see nothing wrong in girls wearing shorts, whether they are under or over 14. It simplifies their athletic activities. Nor do I believe it wrong for a boy to shed his shirt during the hot weather."

Mrs. Hary C. MacDonald, leader of the county's Girl Scouts, declared:

"Pleated shorts are a part of the official Girl Scout uniform. There is no reason why young girls playing games should not wear them. They seem a very sensible and practical costume."

WEDDING PLANS END IN TEARS FOR GIRL, 15

Parents Nip Elopement By Arrest of Pair At McKeesport

Attractive June Sutton had hoped to be a bride today.

Instead, she was a disillusioned and very young woman of 15 years, who broke down and cried in McKeesport Police Court.

June's father, George Sutton, of 2624 Walnut street, McKeesport, had his daughter and her boy friend, George Amchak, 21, of McKeesport, arrested when he learned they had taken out a marriage license.

Today June vowed:

"I'm going back to him if I have to wait 10 years."

But Magistrate E. M. Trich threatened to hold her for Juvenile Court.

Then the tears came. And June's ma and pa each lent her an arm and marched her home.

OHIO BOYS BARE DEATH PLOT DETAILS

By AL GOUGH
Staff Correspondent.

CANTON, O., Aug. 3.—While Ernest Schwarz, traveling gold trader, talked with the parents of one of his slayers a week before he was "put on the spot," the two 15-year-old boys charged with the crime planned it in whispers just out of earshot, authorities say they told them today.

They talked at first only of robbery, according to A. C. L. Barthelmeh, assistant county prosecutor, who declared the boys told him:

"We only wanted to lay him out."

Willard Tschan, credited with being the "brains" of the plan, suggested hitting their victim over the head, according to Barthelmeh.

William Lloyd Gruber, said to have done the actual shooting, was in favor of "conking" him back of the ear, the assistant prosecutor said he told him.

LET HIM HAVE IT!

When it came time for the actual holdup, Barthelmeh says Gruber told him:

"I just changed my mind and let him have it."

The belief that Schwarz knew the gold he bought from the boys on his first visit to Canton three weeks ago was stolen and encouraged them to get more, regardless of the means, was expressed by authorities investigating the killing here today.

The Dormont trader, it was said, purchased $16 worth of antiquated jewelry for the gold value from the boys on their first meeting.

Obtained at the same time was the old-fashioned nickel-plated revolver with which police say Schwarz was killed.

AUTHORITIES PUZZLED

Both boys told authorities Schwarz repeatedly urged them to get more gold and Gruber added Barthelmeh said:

Stark County authorities were at a loss to know exactly what procedure would be taken with defendants so young in a murder case. It was the first time in the history of the county that juveniles were charged with such a crime. Under Ohio law ordinary criminal procedude against children under 16 is in the hands of Juvenile Court authorities, but murder is no ordinary crime.

Charges of murder have been lodged against the boys by Coroner W. C. McQuate, and the case, Assistant Prosecutor Barthelmeh declares, would be presented to the grand jury next Monday. The prosecutor said he did not think Juvenile Court had any jurisdiction in a murder case, but admitted he would have to look up the law before proceeding further.

Barthelmeh indicated that if the boys chose to plead guilty to the charge the court probably would hear enough testimony to determine the degree of guilt and it was likely the youngsters would be committed to a juvenile detention home until they become of age.

The slain Ernest Schwarz was buried yesterday in West View Cemetery after services in a Fifth avenue funeral chapel. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Elsie Schwarz, and four children in their home at 1770 Potomac avenue, Dormont; his parents in Vienna, Austria, and a brother in San Francisco.

FIANCEE LOYAL TO SUSPECT IN LAKE DEATH

'Other Girl' Speeds To Side of Youth Held in Murder

Miss McKechnie

Miss Crain, 23-year-old music teacher, came here from her East Aurora, N. Y., home last night, maintaining:

"He didn't do it; I know he didn't."

Assistant District Attorney J. Harold Flannery says Edwards has admitted hitting Miss McKechnie with a blackjack and dragging her body into Harveys Lake, where it was found Tuesday. Divers yesterday recovered a blackjack.

Flannery last night advanced the belief that Edwards, a mining surveyor, was driven to the killing by the necessity of choosing between the two girls.

In East Aurora, the mother of Margaret said her daughter's engagement to Edwards was announced about six months ago. They met at Mansfield, Pa., State Teachers College three or four years ago, she said.

Arraignment of Edwards will be delayed until "new angles" of the mystery are cleared up, officials said.

Edwards was visited at the Wyoming State Police Barracks yesterday by his father, Daniel J. Edwards, and his minister, pastor of Bethesda Congregational Church at Edwardsville. Police said he held to his story that he became frightened when Miss McKechnie fainted in a rowboat, hit her with the blackjack and then pulled her under the water about 300 feet from shore. Her body was recovered Tuesday night.

DENIES BANNING WAS RECLUSE

Carl Banning, who left $4,000,000, mostly to friends and relatives in his native Lengerich, Germany, was neither a recluse nor an odd old man to his friend, C. V. Witt, of Greensburg.

Witt, the only American resident a beneficiary, having been willed 2½ per cent of the estate of the former Pittsburgher, has been angered by reports that Banning was shabby, that he soled his own shoes, that he dressed poorly. Said Witt:

"Too many ridiculous things have been said about him. He was always well dressed; he was not a count, he had no unusual idiosyncracies. The statement that he soled his own shoes is too much. It's rot."

William M. McFall, attorney and friend of Banning's, plans to leave next week for Germany to settle the estate, it was understood. The man lived in the Mayfair Hotel here. His wealth was unknown to many—just as he was unknown to all but a few.

Doug Planning China Flight 'To Forget'

International News Service.

PARIS, Aug. 3.—Douglas Fairbanks is arranging to fly to China within a week, hoping Oriental skies will enable him to forget his marital troubles and the divorce suit filed in London by Lord Ashley in which he was named co-respondent. This was learned today after London had confirmed the fact that trial of Lord Ashley's suit had been definitely put over to the October court term.

Lady Ashley

According to Fairbanks' friends he is now at Cannes, on the French Riviera, having slipped out of England unnoticed after completing work on his last film. He was accompanied by Alexander Korda.

Fairbanks originally intended to go to Hollywood before making his trip to China, but it is now understood he altered his plans and decided to go immediately, making practically all of the journey by air.

RUSSIAN DEBT TALKS PROCEED

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Progress was reported in the negotiations for settlement of the debt and damage claims against Russia, following a conference between Secretary of State Hull and Alexander Troyanovsky, the Soviet envoy, at the State Department today.

At the conclusion of the conference, which lasted a little more than an hour, Ambassador Troyanovsky told newspaper men that some of the obstacles which had blocked the negotiations at Moscow had been cleared away and the discussions were proceeding in a friendly atmosphere.

A joint communique added:

"Some additional phases of the questions pending between the two governments were informally and tentatively discussed. A further meeting will be held the middle of next week."

SOLDIER HELD IN WIFE DEATH

SACKETS HARBOR, N. Y., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Pvt. Carl W. Lengle, 28, of Bellefonte, Pa., today was charged with murder, first degree, as a result of the drowning on Sunday of his wife, Ruth, 20.

Arraigned on a warrant issued upon information furnished by District Attorney Howard B. Donaldson, Lengle asked the case be adjourned to enable him to get a lawyer. He was remanded to jail.

Lengle, stationed at Madison barracks, has signed two "confessions," Donaldson said. In the first he said he saw his wife drowning but did not go to her aid. Details of the second were not disclosed. He first enlisted in the United States Army at Williamsport, Pa., December 10, 1928.

Counsel Given 'Mail Order Bride'

International News Service.

CLARION, Pa., Aug. 3.—Appointed by Judge Albert A. Geary to defend 19-year-old Leona Menser, Coshocton (O.) girl accused of slaying her matrimonial bureau fiance, two Clarion County attorneys today declined to comment on the defense they will offer.

Miss Menser

Leona, who signed a confession admitting she shot John Kelly, middle-aged farmer, on June 14, remained in jail without bail. Her case will be considered by the grand jury convening late this month.

Becoming acquainted with Kelly through a matrimonial agency, Leona came to Fisher, Pa., in hopes of achieving her great ambition of getting "a home of my own." She lived with Kelly for several weeks and then quarrelled over the date of their contemplated marriage, she told police. It was during this argument that the fatal shot was fired.

CODY PORTRAITS GO AT SALE

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Souvenir hunters, men and women seeking practical household goods at bargain prices, and hundreds of curious thronged through the house of Lew Cody, late film star, as an auctioneer liquidated his estate today.

Sales ranging from a quarter to a few dollars were numerous, but the effort of the auctioneer to dispose of the actor's English Norman home at a price of $15,000 or better to satisfy mortgages still lacked success. No bidders appeared.

Last night a group of portraits done by John Becker, with a group of famous persons as subjects, were sold at prices which ranged from $2.50 to $12.50.

A picture of the former New York Mayor, Jimmy Walker, brought $2.50 and one of Irene Dunne, film actress, the same amount. Portraits of Clark Gable and the late Fatty Arbuckle were worth $5 apiece to two purchasers. A picture of Gloria Swanson went for $10 and a group of the three Barrymores, Lionel, John and Ethel, brought top price of $12. An autographed picture of Rudy Vallee brought 60 cents.

FAN DANCERS RAIDED

Declaring "the lid is not off," police squads last night raided five villages and "The Bowery," seized gambling wheels in each place, closed an exhibition, and on their way out ordered pants placed on Faith Bacon, a fan dancer.

Officials said they would not permit abuses of their new liberalized policy, adopted at the insistence of disgruntled concessionaires.

GUNMAN EATS CONE, FLEES

He asked for an ice cream cone, then he sat at a table and ate it—this at 5 o'clock this morning.

Refreshed, he flashed a revolver and ordered the proprietor into a rear room. They wrestled. Finally he became disgusted with his lack of success and fled, no richer.

He neglected to pay for the cone.

NUDE CADDIES CHASE GOLFERS

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The swanky Exmoor Golf Club in Highland Park fought off the spread of nudism today.

The nudists, about a score of them, romped over fairways and greens and splashed around in the water hazards, to the consternation of the golfers.

It was the caddies' novel way of striving for more pay, and the climax of their strike.

Earlier yesterday they had demanded more money—at once. One hundred and sixty of them dropped bags they had been carrying and met at the clubhouse.

Pickets were pressed into action and no bags were hoisted, even by the golfers.

One golfer solved the problem.

"Why not take only two clubs and play anyway?"

The plan meeting unanimous approval, the players started out.

Weather Conditions

The low that was centered over the upper lake region yesterday is now well down the St. Lawrence Valley. It produced generous rains over the lake region, the Ohio Valley states and eastward, during yesterday and last night. Another low appears in Southern Alberta this morning, and extends down over the states west of the Rocky Mountains. It is causing only cloudy weather thus far. A high pressure area, centered over the Upper Mississippi Valley and the northern plains is causing a change to cooler weather over the northern states east of the Mississippi, while the northwestern low is causing warmer weather in the Northwest. High maximum temperatures occurred again yesterday over Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Oklahoma and Arkansas, the highest reported, being 106 degrees at Wichita.

River Conditions

Moderately heavy rainfall over the basin during last night is causing a slight rise in the rivers. Stage at Franklin is zero; Lock No. 7 (Mon.), 10.6; Pittsburgh, 10.0; Dam No. 4, 9.8; No. 6, 9.7; No. 10, 9.4, and No. 12, 8.5. The dams are up. The Ohio River will remain nearly stationary.

JOHNSON TURNS GUNS ON NRA CRITICS

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Having delivered a fiery speech attacking critics of President Roosevelt and the NRA, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson today turned his efforts toward settlement of the Stockyards strike.

In the course of his address last night, broadcast from the World's Fair, Gen. Johnson said he is ready to retire as administrator of NRA as soon as President Roosevelt chooses to release him.

His task of setting up codes for the nation's various industries is about completed, he said.

The address bristled with invective as the general flayed newspaper critics of the administration and discussed the subject of freedom of the press. He said:

"When I took this job I said it would get me in the end, and I have seen no reason to change that view. It was a job to try to get people to behave in business by getting them to agree with each other to cut out such rough stuff as sweating labor, exploiting the public, working the children, cut-throat price fixing and various other eye-gouging and knee-groining foul tactics."

This brought a lot of opposition to the NRA, Gen. Johnson admitted. He continued:

"I have made no bones about fighting back and so of course there are many after my scalp.

"My friends warned me not to do this, and I admit it gets you nothing but knocks. But I have an idea about it that may be smarter than theirs. It is that there are 125,000,000 people in the country, most of whom come from just such sorroundings as mine."

SEEK WEIRTON PLANT OPENING

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Seeking reopening of the Clarksburg plant of the Weirton Steel Company, which closed July 1, 850 of the employes have signed an agreement pledging themselves not to strike, a commitee representing the company union plan announced.

The committee is composed of Ernest Holt, chairman; Charles Means, secretary-treasurer, and Charles R. Mason, Burl Baughman and L. J. McCray.

The agreement also provides that the men will abide by the rules of the employes' representative plan of collective bargaining, the committee said last night.

The committee said that when a sufficient number of signatures are obtained a request will be made to company officials at Weirton to reopen the plant.

Police Registration Of Labor Men Banned

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia has ordered the police department to abandon its plans for registering credentials of labor leaders and issuing identification cards to them.

Police Commissioner John F. O'Ryan, who had been critized by union leaders and others for fostering the identification program, disclosed it originally had been suggested by the Mayor at the request of several labor organizations.

Richard Washburn Child Sees 'Hand-Me-Down' Civilization As New Deal's Next Objective

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

THE PRESIDENT has projected a plan to "decentralize" industry.

Courageous ideas by the President are at one time the reason for his election and the cause of his present hold upon the admiration of the nation.

Mr. Child

Insiders have known for a long time that he has had in mind a movement to encourage close-quarter industries, particularly the smaller, to go out of congested areas, where living conditions are bad, to semi-rural districts where workers may cultivate their own self-subsistence garden plots and find better air, recreation and ownership of real homes.

He had this in mind before election.

The more practical industrialists will be asking, of course, what will happen to the tax income of cities and to real estate and to the financial soundness of crowded municipalities, if factories in wholesale lots move away.

THEY will be asking in the projected conference on the subject after the President gets back just how the march is to begin.

Is the city equipment for production and distribution to be scrapped?

Does the movement to the smaller community imply lower wages, as it often has when the movement is purely voluntary?

What impulse and inducement is to be furnished for this dislocation by government, and if it costs something, who is to pay—the taxpayer?

Will the city dweller take to the uprooting and can he adapt himself to the after-hours plow, spade and weeder, the pulsing of crickets and the lack of a gregarious neighborhood?

SUCH questions will not be asked to challenge the intent of the plan nor to discredit the President's willingness to go to courageous lengths—even attempts to re-distribute population in a way which on the surface appears to serve the happiness of man.

Such questions are subordinate anyhow. The larger question is how fast and how far may government go in furnishing a new READY-TO-WEAR CIVILIZATION.

Steady and founded civilizations usually grow.

No records show one as a success that came as a short-order off the grill, no matter haw capable the rotisserie.

Russia and several nations in Europe have made a fashion of ready-to-wear civilization—they are all "broke."

Desirability is not the only measure of things to be done.

Possibility is one measure, cost is another.

It may be desirable to have every family in the United States possessed of an artisian well.

The task, however, might be impossible and the P. W. A. might bankrupt the United States in attempting these borings for water.

IF NORMALLY civilization develops on the grounds of self-interest of production, economy, labor and the pursuit of happiness, the semi-rural trek with its rose vined cottages and teeming gardens may start of its own accord.

No one objects to the government giving its blessing to such a new march of civilization.

But ready-to-wear civilization put forward by planning boards are not emergency measures; they are frankly revamp plans for our civilization—a civilization that, whatever its intoxication of the 20's and disillusionment of the 30's has outstripped any other in stability and advantages distributed to the greatest numbers of living souls.

IT REMAINS A TOUGH FIBRED, A PATIENT, AND RESILIENT CIVILIZATION, AS SURE OF A SUCCESSFUL TOMORROW AS THE RISING OF THE SUN!

TO TAKE the bull by the horns, as the President did with the emergency was magnificent. To encourage the slow and careful steps toward a better distribution of people and industry may be a government function if used wisely. But moves toward permanent invasions of natural growth of orderly civilization by governments, either requiring the slightest signs of duress or the forced expenditure of taxpayers' money, to make ready-to-wear civilization are open to this comment:

NO READY-TO-WEAR CIVILIZATION HAS EVER FITTED HUMANITY.

Every one of them tends to gag the mouth, bind at the throat, pull at the elbows, constrict at the knees and pinch the toes. Every one seeking freedom loses freedom. Every one looking for short-cut achievements is taking a licking. None has yet avoided going on a toboggan to bankruptcy.

Each European example has had to turn to its government planning boards and say:

"Little men, what now?"

Schnader Appeals To 'State Patriots'

EMAUS, Pa., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Attorney General William A. Schnader, Republican nominee for Governor, appeals to Pennsylvania's citizens to "translate into action" their pride in their state.

The pride itself is valueless without action to support it, he reminded Emaus residents in the midst of celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of chartering of the town. The need for "active unselfish citizenship was never greater," he declared.

G.O.P. DEMANDS FEDERAL AID FOR NEEDY

HARRISBURG, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Leaders of Pennsylvania Republicanism today had demanded that the federal government feed and clothe the state's needy through next January and pledged themselves to support unemployment relief legislation at the next regular session of the General Assembly.

Meeting to lay plans for the fall campaign, state-wide candidates and county chairmen and vice chairmen adopted a resolution putting the relief problem squarely up to the federal administration and heard confident expressions of victory in November.

STIRRED BY ULTIMATUM

After advancing the state sufficient relief money to last through August, Washington decreed that no additional funds will be granted until the state shoulders a "reasonable" share of the burden.

That ultimatum immediately created a flurry of reports that a special session of the Legislature would be called to raise money for the state's 300,000-odd unemployed.

Gov. Pinchot, saying he is doing everything in his power to avoid a special session, asserts he will make the call "wide open" to permit consideration of diversified legislation if he finally concludes a session is necessary.

PLEDGE SUPPORT

The leaders and candidates pledged themselves "to co-operate with William A. Schnader, Republican candidate for Governor, in obtaining from all candidates for the Legislature and from members of the State Senate whose terms will not expire this year, definite pledges to pass promptly at the regular session of the Legislature in 1935, whatever legislation is necessary to provide funds to bring Pennsylvania's contribution for unemployment relief up to the average contribution made by other states in 1933 and 1934, or if the federal government insists on discriminating against Pennsylvania, then up to the amount demanded by federal authorities."

M. Harvey Taylor, Republican state chairman, expresed confidence that the party will win in November.

ALUMINUM CO., WORKERS MEET

Representatives of the National Council of Aluminum Workers were to meet with officials of the Aluminum Company of America today for final discussion of terms of a union agreement to be negotiated at all plants of the company.

Terms of the agreement were submitted to the company on July 24 and strike action was postponed to permit the company to consider the proposal. The strike was set for midnight, July 25.

Depending upon the outcome of today's conference, scheduled for late this afternoon, was the question of whether a strike would be called, involving some 35,000 workers in plants of the Aluminum Company of America throughout the country.

Officer Dead

LIEUT.-COM. CARL K. MARTIN

Military Rites For Byrd's Classmate

Full military rites tomorrow at Arlington National Cemetery, Washington, will mark burial of Lieut. Com. Carl Kennard Martin, 45, retired naval officer and classmate of Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, who died yesterday at his home, 6201 Walnut street, East End.

Funeral services were to be held today at Samson's funeral home, Neville street.

Com. Martin was born in Pittsburgh and attended Mercersburg Academy and the United States Naval Academy, Annapolis, graduating in the class of 1912. As a submarine and training camp officer, he served throughout the World War. He also served in Guatemala in 1920, and was in charge of a United States gunboat stationed in the Yangtese River during the Sino-Japanese conflict.

Following his retirement in 1930, he was associated with the Pittsburgh Motor Club and the Dravo-Doyle Company.

Surviving him are his mother, Mrs. James Stephen Martin, widow of a prominent Pittsburgh musician, and two sisters, Mrs. Ruth M. Khuen, of Sewickley, and Mrs. Riffell Rhoton, wife of a naval officer stationed in Honolulu.

12 Wait Hearings As Rum Violators

Twelve persons will be given hearings tonight before Alderman Clarence E. Clagett, 6114 Center avenue, on charges of violating the state liquor laws. Included among them are three women. All of the charges resut from raids on stores and residences in Rankin and the Hill district, it was said.

3 Chilean Fliers Die in Ari Crash

SANTIAGO, Chile, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—A Chilean air force plane, with the bodies of its three military occupants charred by fire, was discovered late Wednesday at Los Sauces, in the province of Coquimbo. The news reached here today.

BECK, LAUDING COOLIDGE, RAPS 'DICTATORS'

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—United States Representative James M. Beck (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, speaking today at exercises in honor of the late Calvin Coolidge, charged that the New Deal had subjugated "individualism" and said that "dictatorial powers are not less dictatorial because they might be politely and apologetically exercised."

Rep. Beck

The representative attacked those who criticised the administration of President Coolidge, saying:

"It is the fashion of some of the academic apprentices, who now constitute an overgrown federal bureaucracy, to sneer at the administration of Calvin Coolidge.

"Let me remind them that if they, in their varied schemes to redistribute wealth, are now able to command the lavish and too often wanton expenditure of billions of dollars, their opportunity thus to scatter billions is partly due to the wise administration of Calvin Coolidge, which in a few short years had not only paid all the expenses of the government out of current receipts, but had reduced the national debt by the enormous sum of ten billion dollars."

RAPS REGIMENTATION

Contending that under the New Deal, "individualism" was smothered, he said:

"If Calvin Coolidge were alive today he would prefer that 'square deal' of individualism to the 'New Deal' of bureaucratic regimentation which has changed the American from a citizen to a subject.

"The Constitution never intended to vest all powers over trade and industry in the federal government. It prescribed a much narrower channel of power. Each state was to regulate in its own discretion the trade and industry that was in its borders.

"Today the federal bureaucracy controls all trade and industry withn the United States. Never in the history of our nation has there been such an usurpation of power by the federal government. It cannot be reconciled with the plain provisions of the Constitution, and it cannot be justified on the theory of an emergency, for if a so-called emergency can temporarily suspend the Constitution, then we are living under a government of unlimited powers, for the federal government can, at any time, when inspired by the lust of power, create the emergency, then declare its existence and then arbitrarily suspend the Constitution. That great compact never authorized the creation of a dictator or a suspension of its mandates."

IRON HAND IN GLOVE

Speaking of the power behind the New Deal, Representative Beck said:

"I appreciate that the dictatorial powers of the NRA and the AAA have been exercised by an iron hand veiled in a velvet glove. A pretended spirit of moderation has been one concession to the American spirit but dictatorial powers are not less dictatorial because they might be politely and apologetically exercised."

The speaker came to the defense of Henry Ford whom he termed "America's greatest industrialist," saying:

"No one questions that Mr. Ford was under no obligation to sign the automobile code. As an individualist he preferred to conduct his business without the protection of the Blue Eagle, which he regarded as an emblem of governmental tyranny. To the administrator of the NRA this was high treason."

Got No Riches From Willys, Says Ex-Wife

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Mrs. Isabel Van Wie Willys, divorced from John N. Willys, automobile magnate, at Miami, Florida Monday, denies that any extensive property settlement has been made.

Mrs. Willys

It previously was reported Willys settled for $7,650,000. He declined to discuss the matter on his return to New York from Miami, where he married Mrs. Florence E. Dolan soon after the divorce was granted.

Charles H. Tuttle, attorney for Mrs. Isabel Willys, made public the statement declaring published reports "altogether untrue." In part it said:

"I asked for no alimony and received none; and no settlement was made upon me. Outside of $20,000 to care for certain immediate financial necessities and outside of his repayment of a small loan made at his request, nothing whatever was paid to me."

Willys said last night:

"There was no necessity for any settlement at this time, as I have very amply provided for her in past years, income from which will more than take care of her for the rest of her life.

"Regarding my daughter, she is 23 years old and married. I provided a trust fund for her some years ago and the income gives her a good monthly allowance."

JONES TO HEAD STATE HOUSING ACTIVITIES

Edward M. Jones, NRA director for Pennsylvania, will direct the Federal Housing Corporation's activities in the state, it was announced in Washington today.

And Jones, awaiting official notification, is mapping plans to move into action when the word comes from National Housing Director J. A. Moffett.

Jones said:

"The original setup was that the NRA directors would also head housing activities. I haven't received official notification as yet.

CITES SHORTAGE

"But the housing act should be a tremendous lever. When the depression hit us in 1921, the construction of new homes to remedy the shortage pulled us out.

"The present shortage of homes in Allegheny County alone has been computed by the business research bureau at the University of Pittsburgh at 20,000.

"This takes into account 12,000 vacant houses. So there must be a tremendous number of people doubling up.

"There are three phases of the housing program, as I understand it.

"The first big drive will be the modernization of homes—repairing, reconstructing and modeling. The plan is to have the banks refer the requests for loans to the government, and we guarantee them up to $2,000.

UNDECIDED ON SETUP

"The second phase is the home building. The money will be borrowed through banks or building and loans, which will co-operate, and we will guarantee these up to $16,000.

"The third is the slum eradication and big housing program. These projects may be developed in units to cost up to $10,000,000."

Director Jones explained that he had not as yet been advised as to whether he would set up a new organization or use his NRA key men. He added:

"I'm ready to go when I'm told. And I'm convinced there is a perpetual shortage of houses."

Garage of Labor Leader Dynamited

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The automobile and garage of Thomas Maloney, union head who led the anthracite strike in February, were dynamited about midnight, 45 minutes after Maloney came home from a miners' meeting in Scranton.

Maloney escaped injury.

CO-ED FASHIONS CREATE NEW VOCABULARY

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—First co-ed:

"What are you going to wear?"

Second co-ed: "I guess I'll go in a droop and I'll have to get into my Susan."

This is not an extract from the international code, nor yet a strange new language discovered in the South Sea Islands. It's the latest in college girl slang, as uncovered by Harper's Bazaar in a survey of 27 colleges throughout the nation.

It is explained that "droop" is the University of Oregon term for a long dress, and "Susan" means girdle at Vassar. At Purdue, on the other hand, a girdle is a "squeezer," at Smith socks are "footsies," and at Iowa State soft crushable hats are "jam-ons."

CAMPUS 'UNIFORMS'

In an attempt to ascertain the wardrobe requirements of a well-dressed co-ed, Harper's Bazaar has sent questionnaires to 271 of the best-dressed students in representative colleges in the East, West, South and Northwest. The results, as presented in the August issue of the magazine, reveal the following facts:

Tweed skirts and sweaters, usually buttoned on backwards, are the classic campus uniforms in eastern colleges minus men. For classes the girls affect a certain picturesque carelessness, rolling up their sweater sleeves and wearing socks and flat-heeled shoes and no hats.

In co-educational universities of the Middle West, where men are always present, the girls spend more time on their appearance, keep their hair carefully waved, wear well-tailored woolen dresses and higher heels. They need more silk afternoon dresses for tea dancing and such.

LIKE IMMIGRANTS

Vassar has its own bag of tricks. There the girls wear bright shawls over their heads, like immigrants, while going from class to class, and go in for shorts in warm weather and ski suits in winter. They like Tyrolean hats and go bare-legged to classes sometimes all through the winter, wearing anklet socks.

Wellesley students wear ear muffs and no hats in winter, while at Radcliffe it is correct to wear white sport shoes in winter. At Smith you wear a string of pearls with your sweater, and at Wells they wear sailor pants and slacks to classes, with knitted baby bonnets. Syracuse girls go to classes in ski suits.

But all this is changed when the eastern college girls go away for week-ends. Then they appear on the train immaculately groomed and dressed in sophisticated town clothes, studied to compete with the wardrobes of Manhattan debutantes.

STAR MUST PAY AGENCY CLAIM

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Elissa Landi, motion picture actress, must pay an assignee of Mrs. Ad Schulberg and Charles K. Feldman, theatrical agents, $7,400 as commission on film work she received, under a ruling by Judge Lester W. Roth.

The agency had sued for $11,000 and Miss Landi filed a cross complaint asking that her contract with Mrs. Schulberg and Feldman be invalidated.

Judge Roth yesterday held the contract was valid and denied the actress' plea, saying:

"Whether an agency renders a valuable service to a star may be a debatable question, but the evidence shows the contract in this case was entered into in good faith and that the agency put forth its best efforts to represent Miss Landi."

Leigh Will Retire, 47 Years in Navy

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The Navy has authorized Rear Admiral Richard H. Leigh, chairman of the Navy general board, to retire September 1 because of physical disabilities incident to his 47 years of active service.

Leigh, a former commander-in-chief of the United States fleet, returned last week from London where he was one of the American representatives in discussions preparatory to the 1935 naval conference.

Dope Found in Raid, Woman Discharged

Florence Wilson, 46, whose rooming house at 326 East Lacock street yielded a small quantity of narcotics when raided by police yesterday, was discharged in Morals Court today after she testified she was a drug addict, registered with the government.

REICH TENSE AS HITLER RULES

Intense speculation centers about Hitler's choice for vice chancellor, now that Franz von Papen is removed from that post by being named special envoy to Austria.

At least three possibilities are advanced by reliable observers: Gen. Werner von Blomberg, minister of defense; the experienced diplomat, Konstantin von Neurath, now foreign minister, and Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia, who is called "the most Nazi of them all."

NATION AT CROSSROADS

One experienced neutral observer said:

"The one selected can determine to a great extent whether Germany henceforth will lean towards an increased military consciousness, as represented by von Blomberg; toward greater international amity if it's von Neurath; or toward an intensified Nazi program if Goering is chosen."

Von Blomberg, many believed, may be chosen in an effort to impress the Reichswehr that it is still an important and indispensable factor in the life of the Reich.

Nazi quarters are represented as believing a dyed-in-the-wool fellow-member of the party should be Vice Chancellor in case incapacity or death removes Hitler.

GOERING ADVOCATED

For this reason Goering is being advanced by some, who declare his quick action in the June 30 revolt quelled a threat to the regime.

He may, however, have a rival in Paul Joseph Goebbels, Minister of Propaganda, described as a Nazi intellectual light. Rudolf Hess, minister without portfolio, has also been mentioned.

Hitler is expected to announce his plans in the funeral oration he will make Tuesday at von Hindenberg's funeral at Tannenberg.

SHUNS TITLE

The letter said:

"The necessity for regulating the question of the chief of our state caused by the national misfortune that has overtaken our people leads me to issue the following order:

First—The greatness of the deceased has given to the title of Reichpresident unique and non-recurring significance according to the feeling of all of us, and, in what it meant to us, this title is indissolubly bound up with the name of the great deceased. I, therefore, request care be taken in official and unofficial communications to address me just as heretofore, as Fuehrer and Reich Chancellor only. This stipulation is to be observed in the future, also.

"Second—I desire the vesting in my person, and thereby in the Reich Chancellor's office as such, of the functions of the former Reich Presidency, decided upon by the cabinet and constitutionally valid, and shall receive the expressed sanction of the German people.

ELECTION CALLED

"Steeped in the conviction that all authority of the state must proceed from the people and by them be ratified in free, secret election, I request you immediately to lay the decision of the cabinet, with possible necessary additions, before the German people for a free plebiscite."

Details of the plebiscite have not been made known. It is assumed the vote will be a "yes" and "no" proposition.

The short decree by which Hitler merged the offices of Chancellor and President did not mention the constitution, a lifeless thing since the Nazis came into power.

Hitler last night, his voice choked with emotion, eulogized von Hindenburg, once his political enemy, as "the man without whom the present government of Germany would have been impossible." He said:

"I have lost a fatherly friend, whose death caused the entire German world to suffer a serious blow."

LONDON, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Europe's mighty nations gazed on a little man today and asked: "What now?"

Governments, figuratively a bit pale, wondered where Germany was headed under the rule of Adolf Hitler, erstwhile alien, house painter and army corporal. Uncertainty is noted in all of Europe's capitals.

First foreign-born ruler in Germany's history—he is a native of Austria—Hitler has shown so far that he can make the grade. He hash climbed to the point where he holds the peace of the continent in his hands, Europe believes, now that he has become what one Berlin newspaper called "executive of the Divine will."

FRANCE IN DREAD

Dread for the future underlies French comments on the question whether he will seek a goal of friendship or assume a belligerent attitude.

Pope Pius XI is disturbed by fears that a sudden change in German rule may add to Europe's myriad difficulties.

rounded, was to enter the building and then and there shoot down the general staff.

This was considered necessary because Roehm believed the rank and file of the army was friendly to the Storm Troops and to himself; that only the general staff was against him and that if it could be removed, the army, as a whole, would go over to him.

Now comes the first creditable information of the flight of Ernst to Bremen where he was arrested on the morning of June 30. Critics of the Hitler version of the conspiracy have objected that Ernst could not have been planning an attack in Berlin Saturday afternoon if he was in Bremen Saturday morning.

ERNST IN FLIGHT

But now it has become known that Ernst had gotten wind of the fact that the general staff was appraised of the conspiracy.

Roehm wanted to go ahead anyway on the assumption that Ernst, with his numerically superior troops, could fight his way into the Reichstag ministry even if the general staff got a few Reichswehr troops into town quickly enough to defend the building. Ernst said nothing, but privately made up his mind to quit. He was quitting when he was arrested at Bremen with steamship tickets and 140,000 marks in his pocket.

Ernst's conduct has afforded critics of Hitler's conspiracy story their death point. It now seems adequately cleared up. The Prussian general staff officers do not go personally armed without a good reason.

ARMY GRATEFUL

Now it is easy to see why the army accepted Hitler yesterday. The army depends entirely on what is general staff decides. There never was any question of divisional commanders acting on their own. And the general staff yesterday was full of gratitude to Hitler.

Not merely because he had removed the Storm Troops as a competitor to the army. That was the impression yesterday. Today with this new light it becomes clear that the general staff was frightened. In all probability the insane plan of Ernst and Roehm could never had succeeded and the Reichswehr would have swept Ernst's assassins to death under a hurricane of machine gun fire.

But there it was. After all, no pleasant prospect. And no matter how the attack on the Reichswehr ministry came out, it would have meant civil war between the army and the Storm Troops all over Germany, with tens of thousands dead.

OATH ADMINISTERED

So the army took the oath yesterday. Your correspondent saw them do it in the barracks of the Berlin Guard in Rathenowerstrasse. It was an impressive ceremony with a regiment drawn up in a hollow square and Gen. von Witzleben barking out, two words at a time, the formula that meant from now on every man in the German army is sworn personally to obey Hitler and defend his oath with his life.

They stood with hands upraised and two fingers high in the gesture used in court.

"I swear by God this holy oath."

In every barracks, on every naval vessel, the fighting services swore. The bass drum boomed. The strains of "Deutschland Uber Alles" floated over silent heads of rigid thousands. Hitler was their war lord.

Therewith Hitler has attained a position quite without parallel in any country in the world. For the Red army of Russia does not swear a personal oath of fealty to Stalin. Nor does the Italian army swear allegiance to the Nation. The Italian army swears to the King.

Mussolini has his King. Stalin has his politibureau. Today Hitler is his own King, his own politbureau. He has nobody to check him and he has got the army behind him. Until yesterday it was possible to say that he was the instrument of the Reichswehr. Today the army is his his weapon.

New Bridge Honors Old Indian Ferryman

PORTLAND Ore. — (INS.) — Commemorating the services of the great chief of the Wasco tribe, Dus-Sa-Hi, Leslie M. Scott, chairman of the State Highway Commission, dedicated a $50,000 bridge over the Deschutes River at the same spot where the Indian chief operated a ferry for the benefit of travelers for many years. Chief Dus-Sa-Hi built his ferry in 1860 and thereby eliminated the hazards of fording the treacherous stream.

Citizens Party Name Pre-empted in County

HARRISBURG, Aug. 3.—(AP.) — Fifty-six Allegheny County voters yesterday pre-empted the Citizens' party name for the November elections.

U. S. SYMPATHY SENT HITLER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The death of President Paul von Hindenburg brought from official Washington statements of regret, telegrams of sympathy and unofficial expressions of hope that his removal might not work too great a change in the course of Germany.

President Roosevelt yesterday telegraphed his condolences and Secretary Hull issued a statement paying personal tribute to the patriotism of the war hero.

The President, in the first communication he has ever had with Hitler, spoke of his "sincere sorrow," and extended "to the government, and the people of Germany my sincerest sympathies in their great loss."

New Persecutions Feared by Jews

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia, Aug. 3.—(INS.)—German Jews fear Chancellor Hitler's assumption of supreme power in Germany means a revival of extreme anti-Semitism in the reich, Berlin dispatches to the semi-official Central Radio News Agency said today.

AUSTRIAN NAZI SPARED DEATH

By ALFRED TYRNAUER
International News Service.

VIENNA, Aug. 3.—Less than an hour before he was to die on the gallows, Edmund Honisch, 24-year-old Vienna Nazi leader, received a commutation of sentence to life imprisonment from the hands of President Wilhelm Miklas late this afternoon.

Honisch had been convicted of high treason in connection with the July 25 Nazi raid on the chancellery in which Chancellor Dollfuss was assassinated. He was the fourth of the 144 participants in that raid to go to trial. Two Nazis, Otto Planetta, the actual assassin, and Franz Holzweber, eader of the raiders, were hanged early this week. Paul Hudl, on whose behalf Archduke Eugen intervened, was sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor yesterday.

Only a few of the remaining 140 prisoners will be tried by military courts and because of their youth it is doubted that any more will be executed.

HINDENBURG 3D ON DEATH ROLL

Associated Press.

On February 17 the death of Albert, King of the Belgians, in a mountain-climbing accident, shocked the world and plunged Belgium into mourning. King Albert was 59.

On July 25, only a few days ago, the assassination of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss occurred. His death, at the age of 41, and the manner of its accomplishment, threw the continent into turmoil.

And now the death of von Hindenburg at 86.

NATION HONORS HINDENBURG IN DEATH

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

NEUDECK, Germany, Aug. 3.—Germany's former Crown Prince arrived today at Neudeck, now a nation's shrine, bearing condolences of the Hohenzollerns for the death of their one-time war servant, Paul von Hindenburg.

Friedrich Wilhelm, once heir to the throne, was, however, but one among thousands of mourners for the old warrior-statesman.

The body of the President lies in state in a huge room of the ancestral estate he loved so well. Fifty candles flicker nearby.

Messages poured in from throughout the world—from kings and commoners. East Prussian farmers, neighbors of the President, sent expressions of their grief along with rulers.

ORATION BY HITLER

Germany will bid von Hindenburg farewell Tuesday at Tannenberg. The orator will be Adolf Hitler, who gathered to himself the venerable leader's authority upon his death yesterday.

Special ceremonies will be held Sunday night at the national war memorial at Tannenberg—ceremonies from which women will be barred.

An official announcement said:

"In view of the limited space available invitations to this ceremony will be issued to male participants only."

It was at Tannenberg that von Hindenburg in 1914 led the German army to a crushing victory over Russia. Germans, who have much to remember von Hindenburg for, will never forget Tannenberg.

LOYAL TO WILHELM

August Wilhelm arrived by airplane this morning. He is staying at the estate of von Hindenburg's old crony, Elard von Olenburg-Anuschau. The dead President was a loyal subject of the former Emperor and often—after Wilhelm fled Germany—was believed to hold monarchist sympathies.

Arrangements have been made for thousands of mourners expected from Berlin to be conveyed to nearby Hohenstein for lodging on special trains.

WORKERS PAY HOMAGE

Humble woodchoppers and other workers on the estate paid their final respects to their master. They filed sadly through the room where von Hindenburg's body lay.

Churches—both Protestant and Catholic—were ordered to toll mourning chimes for one hour every night from 8 until 9 until the day of the funeral. A 14-day period of mourning is being observed by the nation.

War memorial services held last night throughout the Reich on the twentieth anniversary of mobilization were generally turned into mourning services for the dead field marshal.

TRIBUTE BY CHURCH

Reichbishop Lugwig Mueller, preaching in a crowded Protestant cathedral in Berlin in the presence of government representatives, said:

"Our thanks to him can be expressed only by labor and fidelity."

Services at Tannenberg will begin at 11 a. m. Tuesday (6 a. m. Pittsburgh time). The body will be placed in one of the high towers on a corner of the monument.

It will be taken from Neudeck to Tannenberg on a caisson. Hitler and other leaders will follow in motors behind the coffin over the 60-mile road. Soldiers will line the route on either side.

The spot where von Hindenburg is to be buried is the one where he denounced "the German war guilt lie" in 1927 when dedicating the monument.

DOORS BARRED AS 'FUEHRER' MAPS PLANS

International News Service.

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—Adolf Hitler, Germany's "one-man government," was the busiest person in the reich today.

A multitude of problems faced him in his task of merging the duties of President, which he assumed upon the death of President von Hindenburg, with those of Chancellor. Holding supreme power, there was a never-ending pressure upon him to decide the momentous questions that face Nazi Germany.

Hitler was working behind a cordon of guards that kept all except officials from approaching him. He was making no display of his newly-assumed power and has not appeared publicly in Berlin since he flew here from Bayreuth after being informed of the President's serious illness.

REMAINS UNSEEN

The German people, probably, will not have another glimpse of the Reichsleader who controls their destinies until he attends the memorial ceremonies for President von Hindenburg at Neudeck and Tannenberg next week.

Constant conferences with his Nazi lieutenants kept Hitler busy behind the doors of the chancellory. His most frequent conferees were Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier and his closest advisor, and Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels, the active minister of propaganda, mouthpiece of the Nazi regime.

One of the problems that Hitler must decide soon is the appointment of someone to act as his chief deputy under whatever title that may be selected. Under the old system there was a vice chancellor, who was Franz von Papen uptil his appointment as minister to Austria. Obviously a new position to meet the changed conditions resulting from Hitler's dual fnctions must be created and someone named to fill it.

AUSTRIAN HITCH

Another pressing question was the status of Von Papen's appointment to Austria. The Austrian government has refused to accept him as a "special envoy." It had not yet given its consent to receive him even as a regular diplomatic appointee.

Establishment of smooth-working relations with the new government of Austria, particularly as a gesture to quiet charges that Germany inspired the recent Nazi putsch in Vienna in which Chancellor Dollfuss was slain, was regarded as imperative.

Luther Returning To U. S. as Envoy

BERLIN, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Dr. Hans Luther, German ambassador to the United States, departed for Washington today, aboard the Europa, to resume his post.

HINDENBURG'S HOME SILENT

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

NEUDECK, Germany, Aug. 3.—A solemn quiet prevails at Paul von Hindenburg's stately home.

He is surrounded by the objects he loved so well in life, and which so often brought him back to his estate from his arduous duties at Berlin.

Von Hindenburg still lay on his death bed, his countenance pallid and benignly peaceful. In his hands was a cluster of wilting flowers which had been gathered by his children and grandchildren.

An army officer stood guard at each corner of the bed, and on each side of it gleamed 10 candles.

Near the bed were a number of wreaths. On the white coverlet was a bullet which had pierced von Hindenburg's hand in a battle in 1866. A soldier later gave it to von Hindenburg, saying:

"I burned my fingers on this, it was too hot."

It was understood here, but not confirmed, that burial will take place in the family burial plot on the Neudeck estate Wednesday after the body is brought back from Tannenberg. It was believed the willingness of von Hindenburg's family led to the announcement in Berlin that the burial would take place at Tannenberg, but it was thought the Field Marshal's will indicated he preferred to rest here.

TERROR GRIPS WOMEN IN OHIO TOWN

DEFIANCE, O., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Women walked warily last night, nervously watching for sudden movements in shadowy places, as a clubbing, stabbing, gun-wielding terrorist was reported active again.

Police said that, after seven weeks of quiet, the man darted out of shadows near the Auglaize River bridge last night to slash like a madman at Mrs. Ethel Endsley, 20, of Bryan, a housekeeper. She suffered a slight knife wound.

A dragnet by 40 vigilantes, mobilized to assist police, failed to catch the terrorist, described as a young man. It was the fifth attack attributed to the impulse of a lunatic. Six women have been injured.

The mysterious attacks were started May 30 when Miss Kathleen Parrett, 15, was slugged on the head and her mother, Mrs. Frank Bentley, was shot in the leg when she tried to beat off the assailant.

On June 1 the same man, police said, struck in broad daylight, stabbing Mrs. C. R. Williams in the arm when he invaded her residence. On the same night Mrs. Henry Hasch, 61, a widow, was struck on the head when she responded to a knock at her door.

Ten days later, on the afternoon of June 12, Miss Rosemary Mansfield, 17, was slashed across the back as she and a sister, Katheryn, 15, and Miss Julia Rex, 16, were walking in Defiance's central residential district.

Public indignation reached the boiling point after that attack. Mayor Joe C. Kreutsch called a citizens' mass meeting and organized a "secret eight."

This group set up a vigilantes organization and provided a secret means of quick mobilization.

Mate Charges Wife Saw Another Man

John E. Wilson, of 113 Carrington street, North Side, has filed a bill of particulars in his divorce action against his wife, Virginia Wilson, of 7437 Susquehanna street, alleging that since August, 1929, she has devoted the larger part of her time to the companionship of another man.

Wilson avers that Mrs. Wilson has neglected her duties to him and also complains that she ceased conversations with him in September, 1933. He also alleges that she stayed away from him for protracted periods, refused to cook for him and on one occasion threw a coffee pot at him. The couple was married August 14, 1912.

Girl Kayos Prowler 10 Hours With Gun

ROCHESTER, Minn., Aug. 3.—(Universal.)—When an armed prowler entered her bedroom, Anna Reich, 22-year-old farm girl, swung on him with the butt end of a rifle and knocked him unconscious for 10 hours. But before she disposed of the intruder, she accidentally knocked out her own brother, James, 16, who was struggling with the gunman for the latter's revolver.

The prowler recovered consciousness in a hospital.

MYSTERY MAN UNIDENTIFIED IN MORGUE

The Coroner's office today renewed efforts to solve the identity of "Dr. E. J. S.," whose drowned body has lain in the morgue since July 24.

The monogram was found stitched inside the collar of the shirt worn by the dead man when his body was recovered from the Allegheny River near the Sixth Street Bridge.

A dozen bus drivers tentatively have identified him as Earl J. Shellheimer, former bus driver, who disappeared from a rooming house at 1008 Pennsylvania avenue, North Side, about 10 days ago. And Shellheimer's landlady has said she inked his shirts with a similar monogram. "Dr.," she explained, was short for Shellheimer's nickname, "Doc."

But she also asserted the Shellheimer, supposed to have been a World War aviator, had a metal plate fastened to his knee. The dead man had no such plate.

Morgue Supt. John P. Black will communicate with Rochester police, where it is thought Shellheimer's wife and daughter live, and with Army authorities.

Indian's Magic 'Brings' Sprinkle, White Man's Machine 'Makes' Storm

Necromancer Fails In Promise to Osage Tribe

FAIRFAX, Okla., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Nee-Shu-Kah-Hah, the Osage Indian medicine man, is muttering the Osage equivalent of "You can't get blood out of a turnip."

The worst drought in tribal records had settled this summer on the people of the old necromancer, whose name in the white man's tongue is "Rain Maker." Crops had withered; cattle were choking with thirst; the heat was almost intolerable.

Nee-Shu-Kah-Hah decided to do something about it.

He had brought rains before, he confided to fellow braves.

Before he left to climb the high hill where he proposed to charm the weather, "Rain Maker" issued a flood warning. The biggest downpour in history would fall, he said.

Nee-Shu-Kah-Hah built a spell-making fire which sent a long blue plume into the shimmering sky. He beat his prayer drum, chanted the rain-making songs he had learned long ago—then awaited results.

At the appointed time the sky darkened, black clouds gathered. Wind swirled through the buffalo grass, and forked lightning split the sky.

It sprinkled. And that was all.

Dams to Halt Drought Gain U. S. Favor

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—A strong congressional movement for construction of huge reservoirs—perhaps 50 to 100 miles in length—is expected to result from the devastating drought in the western plains states.

The plan being advocated is to dam the Missouri, Arkansas and other rivers at various places from the far north to the south and create vast lakes to hold flood waters.

Army engineers have frowned upon the plan as a method of controlling Mississippi Rivers floods.

Rainfall-to-Order 'Inventor's' Claim For Device

BRANTFORD, Ont., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Brantford has its rainmaker but unlike the Indian medicine man of Fairfax, Okla., he claims he has produced storms, not mere sprinkling. He is Frank Clark who says he has spent 15 years completing a device that draws moisture from the heavens.

Clark declared he had his device "on" for only four hours two days ago and "brought the storm." It did storm at that time.

Clark maintains the "rainmaker" also can receive music—and television is the machine's next development. It will produce any kind of weather, he says.

The "rainmaker," resting in a closet at Clark's home, is a tangle of wires with a packing box, an aerial and a mysterious box wrapped with insulating tape. The box is Clark's own little secret and when asked about it, all he said was:

"Well, it won't hurt anyone."

It is so powerful, he added, only one will be needed on the North American continent. In the winter the weather could be made "to order from day to day." He added:

"I have made it all by myself in my spare time."

Fire Escape Drops, Pedestrian Hurt

Michael Broski, 54, of 1231 Penn avenue, was recovering in the Passavant Hospital today from lacerations of the head and shoulders, sustained when a suspension fire escape struck him on the head at 412 Logan street yesterday. Children playing on the fire escape is believed to have caused it to swing down, striking Broski.

Cut-Rate Auto Tags In Smaller Demand

HARRISBURG, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The demand for motor vehicle licenses at the half-fee rate today continued slightly below the pace set in the August rush of last year. "Bargain" licenses went on sale Wednesday.

Final tabulation of the first day's business showed 19,421 registrations were issued. The total August 1 last year was 26,468.

Dear Mr. Harris:

This is just about the grandest spot I've ever been in. And I hope you'll pardon me for writing you about the store, when, I ought, as you said, "to forget everything but a good time." It's just that I want to be sure you'll get after the newspapers to keep telling the people of Pittsburgh what a fine store you have down there at Liberty and Oliver—how you've improved the character of your goods, your service and your personnel—and that now, in July, with so many vacation-wardrobes to be replenished, you'll be sure to have the papers announce, once more, that:

All You Need is Employment to be Eligible for a Harris Budget Charge

A lot of people are going to work on that $24,500,000 government grant to Allegheny County. Wouldn't it be a shame if those men didn't know they could come down to Harris' and get themselves all outfitted new, as well as their wives and children—and put the whole thing on our convenient Budget Charge Account—with payments spread out over many months? So pardon this long letter, Mr. Harris. And I hope you, too, will have as splendid a vacation as the firm's generosity has made possible for yours truly and all the other regulars down at Liberty and Oliver.

SMITH, SEABURY QUIT IN N. Y. REFORM ROW

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Amid the deepest confusion, legislative efforts to modernize and readjust New York City's ancient charter headed toward the rocks today under the impetus of the resignation from the Charter Commission of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and Samuel Seabury.

Resigning as protest against dilatory tactics of commission members seeking to maintain the governmental and political status quo in New York City, Smith nevertheless was ready to take his fight to the people over the radio.

Mrs. George Wyeth, secretary of the Charter Commission, was the latest to follow the lead set by Smith and Seabury. She tendered her resignation to Secretary of State Edward J. Flynn today.

BETRAYAL CHARGED

She charged the commission had "betrayed the hope of the people" for an easing of the tax burden.

Two other members of the commission also had resigned—Charles H. Tuttle, former United States Attorney, and James Marshall, a well-known Republican.

Unwilling to regard the situation as more than "a purely temporary setback," Mayor Laguardia—long a vigorous proponent of consolidating government functions—struck out at "the antics of the politicians." He said:

"I wouldn't wish anyone the hell I am going through in trying to save this city from the financial ruin that I had to take over. Our present system was conceived and developed for the purpose of fattening politicians and giving power to political machines."

ALL IS CONFUSION

In Albany, where the Legislature has not yet taken action on necessary county reform legislation due to opposition of Republican leaders, the resignation of Smith and Seabury only added to existing difficulties. A recess was taken until Wednesday with little hope of passage of important legislation. A legislative leader said:

"These developments add confusion to confusion."

The present crisis was brought about at last night's meeting of the commission when 17 members voted to recess without action until Tuesday—too late to do anything.

Of the 10 members opposing the recess, five have now resigned.

W. D. MacDONALD

Even New Chef Has Degree From College

Eight new Juvenile Detention Home employes went about their work today—the first of the new staff being built under direction of Judge Gustav Schramm.

Judge Schramm

And now, even the chef has a college degree.

On the basis of Judge Schramm's promise to "take the court out of politics," Walter Rome, detention home manager, interviewed more than 200 before he chose the eight.

In charge of the kitchen now are Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Campbell, of Copeland street.

Campbell studied dentistry and graduated from the Philadelphia Dental School in 1900. Then he studied nutrition problems and later to be an optician, and then an accident prevented him following his chosen career, and after the World War he started in the restaurant business.

Mrs. Mildred McConnell, who gets the newly-created position of house manager and dietician, was graduated from Carnegie Tech home economics, and for the last 12 years was in charge of a number of club, department store and other grills.

The three new supervisors of girls were chosen on a new basis, too. The afternoon and night supervisors are nurses. Margaret Snyder, of Millvale avenue, got her "registered nurse" from the Passavant Hospital and did graduate work at the Children's Hospital. Miss Jean H. Sneddon, of West Ohio street, graduated from the Presbyterian Hospital, and both specialized in children.

The day supervisor, in charge of recreation, is Miss Helen Bedillion, of Clairtonical street. She went to Indiana State Teachers college, Penn State, and the University of Pittsburgh, specializing in physical education.

W. D. McDonald has been boys teacher at Morganza, and several other schools, including the school for the deaf. He's still going to Pitt.

And Harry Frank, of Flemington street, the new utility man, has no degree, but he was an assistant engineer and utility man for a downtown department store for 11 years.

And they gave names for recommendations not of politicians, but physicians, professors and ministers.

CHIROPRACTORS ENDING MEET

With the National Chiropractic convention drawing to a close here, Dr. J. E. Slocum, chairman of the public relations committee, today declared the Pittsburgh assembly the greatest ever held by the organization.

He pointed to the attendance, the largest ever recorded at their conventions, and the valuable research findings which have been reported as indications of the progress of the body.

The convention will close tomorrow at the Hotel William Penn with election of officers and reports of committees as features of the final session.

An outstanding event on yesterday's program was an address by Dr. Francis J. Kolar, of Wichita, Kan., in which he stressed the relation of physical health to mental health. He said:

"The greatest obstacles to nature's healing are fear and worry. The brain directly influences many complicated and delicate functions of the body, functions by which good health is retained and disease prevented.

"This means that our mental attitude may keep us well or make us ill."

RAILWAY UNION DENOUNCES 'LAY-OFFS'

Attorney O. David Zimmerman, representing the men, asked P. H. McCance, personnel director of the company:

"Isn't it a fact that no other street car company in the country has separated so many men from the payroll as the Pittsburgh Railways Company?"

McCance replied:

"That question is problematical."

McCance said no new men had been hired as trainmen since 1924 as all the men needed were taken from the furloughed list. Laying off of men had been necessitated by declining revenues, he added.

The average age of motormen and conductors was 47 years and their experience 20 years, McCance testified.

Pensions to retired trainmen jumped from $14,195 in 1925 to $296,175 in 1933, McCance testified yesterday.

N. Y. TO GRILL PODERJAY ON 'MURDER'

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—An international mystery will be probed to the bottom by New York authorities—to see if murder has been done.

Capt. Poderjay

"Capt." Ivan Poderjay, Jugo-Slavian adventurer, will be brought from a Vienna prison, where he has been held on a suspicion of murder and grilled as to what happened to his missing wife—Agnes C. Tufverson.

Poderjay was indicted for perjury by a grand jury here yesterday.

He is charged with perjury by failing to state he was previously married when he applied for a license on December 4 to marry Miss Tufverson.

He married the latter on December 20. They lived here together. Then Poderjay sailed for Europe. The trunk of Miss Tufverson was found in his possession containing some of her clothing.

SALLY TUFVERSON

When the continental adventurer married Miss Tufverson he was already the husband of Marguerite Ferrand, who is being held with him in Vienna.

The complaint against Poderjay was made by Miss Selma (Sally) Tufverson, of Detroit, sister of the missing woman.

Governor Lehman, of New York, will be asked to request the State Department to forward a Presidential warrant to Austria for Poderjay's extradition.

Ernest Churcher, steward on the liner Olympic, appeared before the grand jury. He testified Poderjay sailed from England on the vessel last year and told him he had a wife in England, one in "his own country" and a third in America.

No direct evidence has been found to show that Miss Tufverson was murdered.

Petitions to Adopt Step-father's Name

Frank Fallis Heck, of 2210 Forest Glen road, Squirrel Hill, has filed a petition in Common Pleas Court requesting that he be permitted to change his name to Fallis Linten Oliver, in order to take the name of his stepfather.

Heck says that his mother, Martha Heck, divorced Frank E. Heck in 1924 and was married to H. C. Oliver August 25, 1927. The petitioner says that he has maintained the relationship of father and son since his mother's marriage to Oliver. Judge James H. Gray fixed October 3 as the time for the hearing on the application.

Child Hurt as Auto Crashed Wall Dies

Patricia Devine, 8, 149 Sawmill Run boulevard, died today in St. Joseph's Hospital of injuries received Wednesday when an automobile, driven, police say, by Alfonse Cancilla, crashed into a stone wall on which she and Marie Garrity, 8, 156 Sawmill Run boulevard, were sitting.

Cancilla, 50, 612 Beltzhoover avenue, is being held for a coroner's hearing by police. The other girl is in the same hospital suffering from internal injuries and a possible fractured skull.

Adventurer Admitted 'Harem,' Steward Tells Jury

M'NAIR POSES AS TRAFFIC EXPERT

Mayor William Nesbit McNair also is an authority on traffic in London, Paris, San Diego and Pittsburgh, he said today, as he urged that the Munhall to Pittsburgh buses turn into the Golden Triangle via the Tenth Street Bridge instead of the Point Bridge.

But the Mayor added:

"The real way to eliminate traffic in the Triangle is to keep both street cars and buses from entering it."

Mayor McNair appeared before Examiner W. E. Best, of the Public Service Commission, as a witness for Bamford Brothers, who operate a bus line from Munhall to downtown along Carson street. They want permission to cross the Tenth Street Bridge instead of going down to the Point Bridge and returning through the lower part of the triangle.

McNair said he was an international traffic authority when he was questioned as to traffic conditions here. He was asked where the traffic here was heaviest, and he answered:

"Where the property is of highest value."

"And where is it lightest?"

"Where the property is of least value."

MAYOR DOCKED FOR VACATION

Mayor McNair is out $121, the price of a three-day vacation in July.

The Mayor was docked exactly that much following a three-day visit to Money Island, New Jersey coast resort, payroll records revealed today. The procedure was explained as being in line with municipal law, inasmuch as city employes of less than a year are not mentioned as eligible for vacations with pay. The Mayor was acquiescent.

Although having spent several days at Alicia, Fayette County, the Mayors secretary, Theodore L. Moritz, was not similarly docked, it is reported.

PICNIC TRUCK UPSETS, 2 DIE

ELKTON, Md., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Two were dead and eight injured today as result of an accident to a truck, carrying a picnic party of 15 members of the Rising Sun (Md.) Methodist Episcopal Sunday School, on the Old Conowingo road near here last night.

The truck skidded on the wet pavement, crashed into a telephone pole and a tree and turned over, according to Acting Coroner F. Rodney Frazer.

The truck was taking the party from Lancaster, Pa., back to Rising Sun when the accident occurred. Harry Fox, of Sylva, Md., owner of the truck, was driving.

Boy Hurt Running From Behind Auto

Charles Doley, 6, of 1304 Sherman avenue, North Side, was recovering today from slight injuries received when struck by an automobile last night near his home. The boy was struck running into the street from behind a parked car. Daniel C. Kohler, 29, 345 Cornell avenue, West View driver, was exonerated by the police.

Man, 70, Arrested In Old Murder Case

PIKEVILLE, Ky., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—A 70-year-old man was in jail here yesterday, suspected of a murder committed 28 years ago after a quarrel over a woman.

Police booked the man as Gilbert Hall. He said he was J. W. Hall from Winnett, Mont., that he had lived in Bowie, Tex., and Granite, Okla., and had never heard of the killing before his arrest.

NEWSMEN WIN LONG COMBAT WITH COURT

DANVILLE, Ky., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Jack Durham and Wesley Carty won their long contest with Police Judge Jay M. Harlan today over the question of whether a newspaper man can be forced to break a confidence.

The end of the long and at times bitter fight that had cost each of them 45 hours in jail and $22 in fines and court costs came when Judge Harlan fined two other men $10.25 each on pleas of guilty to breach of the peace and announced that the court of inquiry into the hanging in effigy of Representative J. Sterling Towles was ended.

"You have kept your confidences," Judge Harlan remarked.

They had reiterated through 11 trials on contempt charges in 10 days that they would go to jail daily all summer before they would say who gave them advance information as to the plan to hang a dummy figure, dressed like Towles, in the courthouse yard here July 19.

Victor Bodner, who clerks in a grocery store here in the summer and attends medical school at the University of Alabama in the winter, and Lucien Chrisman, a filling station attendant here, were the two who entered pleas of guilty to breach of the peace in connection with the hanging of the Towles dummy.

They had several times declined to answer questions at the court of inquiry on constitutionality grounds, including the claim that they might incriminate themselves, and had had their cases postponed on several occasions to permit their counsel to study the law.

Judge Harlan said to Carty and Durham, who had come into court expecting their daily jail sentence of six hours:

"These boys have pleaded guilty to the charge of breach of the peace and the court of inquiry is now over. You have kept your confidences."

Pymatuning Dam Highway Opened

For the first time since the gates of the Pymatuning Reservoir, near Jamestown, Pa., were closed last February, motorists are able to reach the dam over improved highways, as the result of the opening of U. S. Route 322, the Pittsburgh Motor Club announced today.

The route, which runs north from Jamestown to Williamsfield, O., has been under construction several months.

New detours have been placed on U. S. Route 119 north of Uniontown and on the same highway north of Connellsville, the club announced. A blockade has been removed from Route 31 in West Newton Borough.

'PA' DILLINGER BACKS BRAIN REMOVAL

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The secret of what happened to John Dillinger's brain was uncovered today. It was removed from his body and subsequently destroyed in the course of microscopic examination, Dr. Jerry Kearns, of the Cook County Coroner's staff, disclosed.

The solution to the mystery came shortly after John Dillinger, Sr., the dead bandit's father, announced at Indianapolis he had decided not to disinter the body to check up on the missing part. He said he realized the removal was not for malicious purposes and that it was made in the hope its study "might add to scientific knowledge and thereby be an aid to mankind."

Dr. Kearns said the brain had been taken out during the autopsy conducted shortly after the outlaw had been slain. Dr. Clarence W. Muehlberger, toxicologist for the Coroner, was given two-thirds of it and broke it down into particles for his tests. The other third, said Dr. Kearns, was dissolved in chemicals and then analyzed.

The examination disclosed that Dillinger was sober and not under the influence of drugs when shot, said Dr. Muehlberger. There was a slight presence of alcohol.

Dr. Muehlberger drew no conclusions as to the bandit's mentality other than to note there was no evidence of mental ailment.

EAST CHICAGO, Ind., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Capt. Tim O'Neil and Sergt. Martin Zarkovich of the East Chicago and Indiana Harbor police, respectively, today received identical letters from J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Department of Justice, thanking them for assistance in the trapping of John Dillinger, slain bandit.

Zarkovich has been credited with giving much information that resulted in locating the late desperado.

PRISON TO HAVE 'FACE LIFTED'

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The Indiana State Prison may have its "face" lifted to prevent further escape of its inmates.

Plans for extensive remodeling of the prison front were revealed today as Wayne Coy, Gov. Paul V. McNutt's secretary in charge of penal affairs, prepared to present to the Governor a report on the escape of five long-term prisoners last Saturday. Two of the five have been recaptured.

POISON HALTS SUICIDE NOTES

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Mrs. Ida James, about 33, of Brookdale, Cal., died in a hotel last night. Police said she had taken poison.

The woman left two unfinished notes.

"My dearest mother: Have spent hours wondering how I could explain to you about my—"

The other read:

"Dear Jay—"

THIEVES SMASH STORE WINDOWS

Thieves smashing plate glass windows of two Fifth avenue uptown stores, early today escaped with $150 loot in men's clothing and shoes.

One suspect, found a short time later near the scene carrying three suits, was arrested. He gave his name as Dave Syminski, 21, 1920 Bedford avenue.

Three suits were stolen from the window of Harry Morgan, 1021 Fifth avenue. Twenty pairs of shoes were taken from the store of James Cohen & Sons, 1017 Fifth avenue. Damage to the windows was estimated at $350.

The cigarette paper has a lot to do with how a cigarette burns and tastes

It's like this:

You get the right kind of flax paper, made by the right machinery, and made by experienced people, and it helps to make a cigarette burn right and taste right.

The paper for Chesterfield is the best that money can buy. It is tested for three things...

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

Those of us who waste so much time writing verse and mating wordage must sizzle a little seeing that doggerel in a weekly magazine . . . It contains two lines that mate "us" with "dust"—which certainly don't rhyme . . . Yet, a nationally circulated magazine considers it first rate enough to distinguish by reprinting it . . . Poof, poof! . . . Wish I could see a good show . . . I'm still reading the Dillinger denouement in the New York and Chicago papers which are just arriving on the Coast . . . Can't get enough of it . . . I'm not sorry he is gone . . . I wish, however, they had taken him alive—for he was vain enough to gab a lot—and he might have revealed just what happened at Little Bohemia . . . And how he and his mob got away—and where they went and all the rest of the mystery . . . Mebbe when Hamilton and Nelson are nailed—they'll spill it . . . Bing Crosby's best pal was Eddie Lang, whose guitar playing always accompanied Bing's vocals—until Lang died last year . . . Bing has ached about it, too . . . And so one of his twins is named Philip Lang Crosby . . . Wonder if that faker thinks he's fooling anybody every time he writes that he's never written a line to hurt anyone . . . No? . . . Except Irving Berlin, Eddie Cantor, Fannie Brice and countless others . . . But such petty pokes!

The excitement in the various ditorial rooms during the past month . . . The San Francisco war . . . The one in Minneapolis . . . The Dillingeradication . . . The Nazi purgings . . . Dollfuss . . . One right after the other . . . The newspaper reader, excited by current events, certainly must appreciate his newspaper . . . When I am not building columns — I'm buried under the gazettes — devouring every item in them . . . Hugh Johnson's last radio talk from California ranks him second only to the appeal of the President, I think . . . I like his natural delivery . . . And his cussedness . . . Shucks! The time is drawing near when I've got to come home to New York—dawgawnit . . . The good old "torrid East" as the West Coasters keep heckling it . . . Look who's talkin'! . . . With their 95s for the last few days and in some sectors more than that . . . But even so—the nights are incomparable . . . There goes "Fats" Waller on a recorded program . . . His zip and rhythm give me that delightful "high" feeling.

Wish they'd play: "I'm Getting Sentimental Over You" . . . Wonder why they haven't any all-night programs (with records of popular tunes) on any New York station? . . . That's what you get out here all night. Where I always thought the natives went to bed early . . . Amusing to me the indifference of some stars, who simply won't be bothered with orders to be places their employers want them—so the bosses may show off . . . The executive branch of Paramount Pictures still is burning because recently, during a convention of exhibitors, salesmen, et al., a lawn party was thrown at the estate of the big chief . . . The firm issued "formal invitations" to its star players to be on hand to amuse the visitors . . . These invites, it was made clear, were mandatory . . . You had to respond, or else! . . . So what happened? . . . So the studio's only two stars of real importance, male and female, didn't show up . . . Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper.

Something ought to be done in Hollywood about the number of obviously unaccredited "literary agents" of the late Ring Lardner, who are going about the studios claiming to represent the author's widow, and trying to peddle "officially appointed" stories for the screen . . . There are at least half a dozen of them . . . Naturally, if one of these should succeed in interesting a studio in a Lardner yarn, the party making the deal probably would be taken care of, but there is a certain indignity about the eagerness of these posthumous literary agents that doesn't set well, either with the studios or Lardner's friends . . . Nor is it helping to peddle the stories . . . Wonder if the widow or his son, John, are acquainted with them? . . . Damon Runyon will be irked. I'm sure, about that dialogue in "Midnight Alibi" screened from one of his sagas . . . In the flicker, the star, a racketeer and big shot, enters a dice house. Picks up the cubes, and throws "10" . . . He then says: "I'll lay five hundred to a thousand!" . . . When any crapshooter will tell you the odds are: "I'll take $1,000 to $500" . . . If the adapters tell me Runyon wrote it that way—I'll choke.

Here is bitter irony . . . The case of Nydia Westman, a grand actress, who invaded the movie sector . . . One critic out here said of her: "She is an excellent second edition of Una Merkel" . . . Behind this is a story . . . On September 1, 1924, Miss Westman opened in New York in "Pigs." She was something of a sensation. They went looking for an understudy for her, when the play settled down for a long run. After weeks of search Miss Westman herself brought a friend to her boss . . . The friend was Una Merkel! They resemble each other a lot . . . Una got the job as understudy. In the two-year run of "Pigs" Miss Merkel appeared in Nydia's role but once. . . Later both were cast by John Golden in "Two Girls Wanted" . . . To this day they are the best of pals . . . But to get back to the point . . . Miss Westman, who is in her middle 20s, has been on the stage since she was 5. She learned the comedy value of a squeak and flutter long before Zasu Pitts decided to give up tragic rolles for comedy; and she is the originator of that school of acting, so closely followed by Miss Pitts, Miss Merkel, Dorothy Stickney, Muriel Kirkland, Isabel Jewell and others . . . And she is called: "A second edition!" . . . How cruel is ignorance.

The slanguage of the studios is fascinating, but it has been noted so often . . . Best of the lot, I think, is that the lads who juggle the lights—call the hottest bulbs—"Lupes" . . . After Miss Velez, of course . . . Wonder why they keep calling Anna Sten a Soviet actress, when she isn't even a citizen of that country? . . . A psychologist now says that people who get any satisfaction out of "Man on the Flying Trapeze" are moronic . . . Well, I dunno . . . All I know is that I'm very tired of hearing it—but apparently so many others aren't . . . As a result—I now can challenge anybody in the world, when it comes to speed at turning a radio dial.

Interesting angle, that one in Ceveland, where a suburban theater owner tried giving away a 40-cent china plate with each 25-cent ticket to break a recent boycott . . . The customers came in—bought a ticket—got the plate—and then departed without seeing the show! . . . Something should be done about this, too . . . Pat Rooney, I hear, was in a Broadway beanery the other day, and he pointed out that an imitator, impersonating him—was headlining at the Roxy; another at the Capitol; another at the Paradise, while he—the original, was gracefully laying off!

Miss Muir Selected To Star

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 3.—Hello. Spinning off news notes from the week-end's whirligig . . . The movie executive who recently crashed headlines when he had his nose punched for misbehaving at a party, got into another socking match at one of the nicer soirees—and the whole mess is being so hushed up it's a shame!

* * *

Back in 1928 (it seems like a long time, doesn't it?) Warners' made talking picture history with "Glorious Betsy," starring the lovely Dolores Costello. Jack Warner and Hal Wallis, studio headman, were chinning about it the other day—and then got an idea . . . Jean Muir, the studio's new rave, would be ideal for the Costello part—and so it is to be. Casey Robinson has been engaged to write the script under Harry Joe Brown's supervision.

* * *

"Do you know who I am?" chirped Herman. "I am the best scenario writer in Hollywood!"

"I'm sorry," said the officer, "but I'll have to give you a ticket anyway, Mr. Ben Hecht!"

* * *

Wanderings around Hollywood . . . When Danny Danker took Lorena Layson and Juel Wallis to the Biltmore t'other eve, a drunk annoyed them, but Danny stopped him cold with: "Can't a father take out his daughters without being pestered?" . . . Lilian Bond is now tennis-minded. His name is Fred Perry . . . The Claire Trevor-Vic Orsatti spat is over and they're back together again . . . H. N. Swanson, associate producer at RKO, quit over the week-end and intends to produce independently a yarn called "Fraternity Row" (it's probably the novel of the same name by Lois Montrose). "Swany" will make a tour of the colleges, seeking talent for the thing.

* * *

Boulevard buzzings . . . Bert Wheeler's night at the Players' Club Friday evening went on and on with some of the grandest talent in town until the milk man joined the party . . . Patricia Farr, former extra girl, landed the lead opposite George O'Brien in his new horse opera . . . Eli Lloyd Hoffman says: "Broadway's so-called uplift is confined mostly to noses!" . . . Have you noticed the sparkler Helen Mack is sporting these days? . . . "Down to Their Last Yacht" is getting such a dose of re-takes most of the cast have been re-called . . . Dave Epstein postcards from France that he's "homesick for insults by the Brown Derby hangers-on."

* * *

Movietown musings—Doris Patston and Jack Sheehan filled up the gas tank and are driving back to St. Louis to appear in "New Moon" and "Show Boat," then they'll detour it back to Hollywood to begin film careers.

* * *

Snoopings . . . There's chatter around that Katie Hepburn and her hubby are to the making-up stage . . . Helen Morgan's gone to New York, leaving friend husband in the movie village to amuse himself . . . John Krimsky (producer of "The Emperor Jones" as a movie) is in the celluloid city for a look around and may, so the gabby folk say, make a deal with United Artists for another film . . . Romona Bergere, Hollywood's only feminine gag writer, is back at the Hal Roach studio to think up funny pieces of business for the feminine side of comedies . . . Florine McKinney was dropped by the M-G-M studio, where she had been playing bits. Three hours later she had signed for the feminine lead in "Night Life of the Gods," which Lowell Sherman is directing . . . The newlyweds, Nacio Herb Brown and Anita Page, have to forget about a honeymoon for the present. M-G-M said nix to the idea until Nacio completes the musical score for "The Broadway Melody of 1935."

Your Theater and Mine :-: By KARL KRUG

WHAT ABOUT VAUDEVILLE?

News that Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, his wife, veteran vaudeville stars, who were among the headlining favorites in the old Davis, are seriously considering another jaunt around the circuits of the country, is encouraging. Vaudeville, at the moment, is deader than the proverbial doornail, but where there's life there is always hope.

Not only is the Rooney announcement a note of optimism, but New York vaudeville players and agents are excited about Sam Sax's present project in the Vitaphone Studios in Brooklyn. They see a chance for variety to get back in the running if the public takes to a new series of vaudeville shorts Sax is producing.

The old-time acts of the two-a-day are expected to benefit from these 10-minute features, each of which offers a complete vaudeville show. A number of headliners of yesterday appear in the first two shorts of a series of five, and, in addition, the vaudeville names have been bolstered by such favorites from musical comedy as Herb Williams and Reis and Dunn.

Among the important acts listed are the Honey Family, Carl Emmy and his Mad Wags, Jack Pepper, Three Queens, Saul Grauman's Stepping Stars, Arthur Terry and Buster Shaver and His Midgets. With a complete show being put on in these shorts it will be interesting to watch what effect the experiment will have on vaudeville in the flesh. Plans are afoot to follow through with another vaudeville attempt if the films go over.

THE LOCAL SITUATION

It was only a few months ago that I talked to Gus Edwards about the vaudeville situation in general. Gus was of the opinion that the two-a-day could once again come into its own if the price of admission was right and the acts were up to their old standard. What Gus really meant to say, I presume, is that when the economic situation righted itself both vaudeville and the legitimate would right themselves.

To my mind the depression is the only thing that ails the speaking, or parent, theater. Mr. Shafer, of the Pitt, made some money last season by giving the people a brand of vaudeville that didn't put a tax on their depleted purses. That old family trade that the Harris used to own must still be around, or a large proportion of it, at any rate. It would be interesting to watch a vaudeville trial in the Diamond street house again.

Theatricals in the Open Neglected Here

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Outdoor theatricals have been neglected in the Pittsburgh region during several seasons past for no very good reason. Years ago an open-air pageant of "Hiawatha" was shown out beyond Aspinwall, with Clinton E. Lloyd as the presiding spirit, and the experiment proved very popular despite mosquitoes and other enemies of art. Last year Dr. H. Ward Ewalt, of the Dracomtra Players was planning an al-fresco "As You Like It," but it never got beyond reading rehearsals.

Mr. Seibel

With the North and South parks available there is no reason why something like this should not be provided for people who can't bear the mental strain of night clubs.

OPPORTUNITY KNOCKS

There are fine opportunities all along this line. One student organization at Vassar put on Andre Obey's biblical play, "Noah," with blue oilcloth elephants and shiny red monkeys. There was some discussion over the patriarch ordering his children to "scram," which is not an antediluvian word, but everybody seemed to enjoy the exhibition.

At the New Jersey Woman's College they staged an open-air play based on Edgar Lee Masters' "Spoon River Anthology," with a musical setting by Percy Grainger and a speech by Poet Masters himself.

OPEN AIR THEATER

London has gone in strong for open-air Shakespeare in Regent's Park. "Twelfth Night," "The Tempest," "Comedy of Errors," "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Romeo and Juliet," and even "Richard III" have been shown this season. "As You Like It" opened the series. It's the ideal summer woodland play.

Why could not we have something of the sort? For the hungry there could be a barbecue in the Forest of Arden, with Jaques and his woodlanders selling sandwiches to the spectators. The wrestling match also might be turned into a real contest between real champions. And the vocal program of the hunters might be blended into a community sing.

The only thing needed to clear the way would be inexpensive bus service. The parks are there—and Shakespeare is here.

Pianist Is Soloist Of 'Pop' Bill

To night's "pop" concert on the Hotel Schenley lawn will feature Henry Harris, young pianist, as soloist with the Little Symphony Orchestra, under Victor Saudek. He will play the "Concerto in E flat" by Liszt. Lucille Bauch, soprano, will sing "Alleluja," by Mozart. The orchestra will play the following numbers:

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" ..... Mendelssohn
Selection from "Band Wagon" ..... Schwartz
"Metropolis"—a fantasy of blues ..... Ferde Grofe
"Capriccio Italienne" ..... Tschaikowski

Schubert Picture Title Changed

The Fox film originally called "Serenade" and based on the life of Franz Schubert, the famous composer, has been re-titled "Lovetime," "Pat" Paterson and Nils Asther are co-starred in the production now nearing completion, with Herbert Mundin and Harry Green featured. James Tinling is directing.

All in a Day

Sixth Floor of the Storage Warehouse

IT IS very late at night. But no shadows can be found on the sixth floor of the storage warehouse. Up there, piled grotesquely in the stygian blackness, are the odds and ends of old furniture that has never been reclaimed; never been sold.

The dust and air are thick, and the air is pungent with a heavy mustiness. At intervals of an hour, the narrow, oval beam of the watchman's flashlight dances over the forgotten items. Then, back to darkness again.

Back to the limbo of the dead. Back to the time when, in homes, men's voices and women's laughter mingled—and the shouts of children and the rhythmic beat of horses' hooves could be heard from the streets . . .

* * *

"Horses?" said the vase. "That strikes a note in me. I always liked horses. Many times, as I stood on the pedestal in the parlor, I watched them go prancing by, their coats like seals fresh out of water. Then came those gas buggies, or whatever they call 'em now. Then little Jerry got married, and I knew the end was near.

"It was little Jerry who knocked me off the pedestal when he was 4, and screamed crying before his mother ever laid a hand on him. They patched me up with glue or something, and you'd never notice the cracks even today unless you peered real close.

"Little Jerry? He fell off a coach a year after his marriage, just after that New Years party. Funny, isn't it? Me, they fixed. But they never could patch him up." . . .

"Funny thing about me," said the love seat. "I was made for joyous sentiment; for two people with hearts gladdened by the sight of each other. But my life was never really complete. Mrs. Dennis Kelly bought me—and if there ever was a shrew, she was it. Never once did her husband sit on me. He didn't dare, I guess.

"His wife fought with that poor man day and night, and she often plumped down on me so hard that the stuffing oozed out of the cushions. He never fought back but once—and that was the night he got roaring drunk and picked me up and threw me at her.

"Her lawyer smiled at me when I was all cracked with one leg off. He said his client was a poor, defenseless, misunderstood woman—and that I was damned good evidence." . . .

"Well," said a brass bed, "I'm not sorry. Not a bit of it. I've lived my life well. Of course, I'm old and tarnished now, but you've got to expect that.

"I was with one family for 30 years, and was the first to hear the high-pitched squeaking of four infants."

"It used to be nice," said the shaving mug. "Back in the old days. I'd sit on the shelf, pert and straight and shiny, until the right man came into the barber shop. Then the boss of the shop would take me down, drop a cake of soap in me and twirl the brush around until the lather was creamy white.

"Then he'd talk politics to Mr. Winters, and ask if he thought Bismarck and the young Kaiser were on the outs, and whether McKinley was really throwing the country to Wall street, or vice versa."

"In a way," said a kitchen table, "I was the barometer of prosperity. When I was loaded down with good food, that meant the old man was working. When I held cheese and crackers, he was out on a bender again."

"I am 110 years old," said a silver candlestick. "Older than any of these items. Yet I am the most valuable of them all. A little polish, and I would glitter as of old.

"I can remember, as though it were yesterday, when the Civil War was declared. Harriet and George used to practice the quadrille by my light, and George loved her so much that he couldn't talk when it came time to part for the night. Then they drafted him and he tried to get out of it through Judge Rogers—but it didn't work.

"The night before he was to go, he took Harriet in his arms on the porch downstairs. Suddenly there was the sound of two shots. Harriet's mother heard them, and she grabbed me and rushed down. They had done this for love—and it was my light, strangely yellow in the night, which showed that their lives still flickered faintly.

"The three of us died together." . . .

* * *

The oval beam of the watchman's flashlight danced over the forgotten furniture. His breathing was heavy, wheezing.

"What a rotten job I got," he muttered hoarsely. "Just plain rotten. Nursemaid to a pile of junk, that's what I am. No excitement, no fun, no nothin'.

"Now if I could only get a watchman's job in a brewery, then I might find some romance." . . .

'Smarty' Film in Warner Outwits Censors

By KARL KRUG

One of those rare and racy comedies, that used to carry so much ballyhoo before the era of the big cleanup, hit the Warner yesterday. It carries the very appropriate title of "Smarty," and how it got through the censor board I'll never be able to tell you.

This one sneaked up, so to speak, on those first audiences in the Fifth avenue movie house yesterday afternoon. It also must have sneaked around the screening room occupied by the watchdogs of the state's movie morals, if I am any judge of what that august body has deemed what is right and what is wrong for you and me in the past.

Be that as it may, here is a howling entertainment that takes its fun where it finds it and lets it's double-meaning dialogue and risque situations fall where they may. "Smarty" not only skirts the thin ice, it crashes through on many an occasion, and every break is smothered by howls of glee from what resembles a delighted audience. Based on a play written by that excellent comedian, F. Hugh Herbert, "Smarty" is in a nutshell, the tale of a young wife, rollickingly played by Joan Blondell, who commutes between husbands until she gets the one who will treat her the roughest.

WITHOUT A SINGLE "CUT"

I haven't the slightest idea why the censor board held up that fine drama, "Of Human Bondage" so long, and then waved "Smarty" through without, as far as I can tell, a single "cut." A perfect example of the inconsistency of censorship was never more apparent than in the treatment received by these two pictures. You answer it. I can't.

That "Smarty" is a light, frothy affair, productive of laughter not so light, may have had something to do with its uninterrupted continuity on the Warner's screen. All of its sophisticated length is predicated on the premise that a laugh should cover a multitude of sins and thus it pursues its madcap way. Miss Blondell is excellent as the vixenish Vicki and Warren William and Edward Everett Horton are appropiately tamed and untamed as her baffled husbands.

Frang McHugh is around on the fringe of things, injecting a laugh here and a chuckle there with his own quiet ha-ha, and when sex does stick its head right out in the open at the end you'll be ready for it. For, "Smarty" is that kind of a picture. I trust it's tantalizing touch didn't upset the equilibrium of the Pennsylvania censors.

DIX FILM ON BILL

In "His greatest Gamble" Richard Dix heads the cast of the Warner's other feature, a story of father love that, contrary to such things, has the parent a happy, devil-may-care fellow, who does not hide his real feelings under a cloak of laughter. Although the story is pretty much of a washout, sustained direction and good acting carry "His Greatest Gamble" over some tough obstacles. In spite of the picture's obvious shortcomings you find yourself enjoying much of it, and that, after all, is the desired end.

In "His Greatest Gamble," Dix is called upon to protect his child from the domination of a tyrannical mother, and he serves almost 15 years in a French prison before he is able to bring the picture to what is customarily described as an unhappy ending. Little Edith Fellows does some splendid work as the child in the early part of the film, and Dorothy Wilson carries the role on nicely in the later sequences.

Dramatic suspense is fairly well controlled in "His Greatest Gamble," a film that does not come under the heading of a love story in the common meaning of that term, although it is a tale of fatherly love and sacrifice. Tribute should be paid to Leonard Carey, who, in both the Warner features, has butler characterizations that should be classified as something other than bits.

Morning Matinees Feature Jones

Saturday morning matinees for children, sponsored by the local district of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, will be held in the Enright and South Hills theaters. The Enright will feature "Buck" Jones in "The Man Killer" and there also will be Popeye and Krazy Kat cartoons, a comedy and a children's song party, conducted by George Van Why. "Buck" Jones will be featured also in the South Hills, where he will be seen in "Fighting Ranger." This bill will include a "Tarzan" serial episode, cartoon, comedy and an educational film.

Pendarvis' Network Debut

Paul Pendarvis and his orchestra, playing currently in the William Penn Urban Room, make their debut on the NBC-KDKA network tonight at 12:30 in a weekly round of rhythms.

With Pendarvis are Patricia Norman, 19-year-old El Paso singer, and Eddie Scope, winner of the 1933 Whiteman college auditions in Chicago.

* * *

A gala welcome-home program, celebrating the return from Hollywood of Jack Benny, Mary Livingstone and Frank Parker, is staged tonight over an NBC-WCAE network at 10:30.

* * *

The wide open spaces where men are men, serve as a setting for the "stooperetta" presented by Col. Stoopnagle and Budd during the "Spotlight Revue" on a CBS-WJAS network from 10 to 10:45.

O'KEEFE

Making his entrance to the strains of "The Man On the Flying Trapeze," the song he helped popularize, Walter O'Keefe contributes a goodly share of his sparkling witticism to the Chocolateers program heard over KDKA tonight at 8.

The musical program featuring Ethel Shutta and an orchestra under the direction of Bobby Dolan, includes "Straight From the Shoulder," "Dames," from the talking picture of the same name and a medley of tunes from "Show Girl' and "The Very Thought of You."

* * *

"Dead Timber," an intense drama featuring Don Ameche and Cliff Soubier, is the First Nighter presentation on an NBC-WCAE network at 10.

Sound effect technicians play an important part in the drama, reproducing the sounds of the roaring, blistering forest fire that occurs as the play reaches its climax.

DOKE TO PLEAD 'NOT GUILTY'

International News Service.

WOODLAND, Cal., Aug. 3.—"Not guilty" will be the plea of Judson C. Doke, 33, San Leandro city official, when he appears in court August 22 to answer a charge of murdering the youthful curly-haired poet-lover of his 26-year-old wife, Helen Louise Doke, poetess.

Defense attorneys began to build the anticipated "not guilty" plea around the "unwritten law," confident Doke would be acquitted of slaying Lamar Hollingshead, the 23-year-old University of California student-poet who exchanged burning love letters with Mrs. Doke during a six-month illicit romance.

Roosevelt 'A Natural' On Radio

By AIRCASTER

Last night, it was explained in this column that Al Smith, in his presidential campaign, thoroughly hated to speak over the air, and that his rasping voice and East Side accent may have had something to do with his political fate.

Mr. Roosevelt

* * *

On the other hand, take Roosevelt. Even his opponents concede that he has gained countless friends by his friendly, fireside talks with the public.

He has the gift of reducing the most obtruse and difficult governmental problems to one syllable words. It is a gift that few men have, and an invaluable political asset in these airminded days.

* * *

Roosevelt is a natural when it comes to broadcasting. Of all the public men who go on the air, he is the most at ease.

* * *

HE LIKES IT

He prepares his talks, of course, but he is so much at ease that he "ad libs" frequently.

He talks on the radio as one engaging in a friendly conversation. He has a showman's sense of the value of timing—a pause here, a pause there, for emphasis.

Moreover, he really likes to broadcast.

* * *

Broadcasting of political speeches has now become so commonplace that it no longer excites attention. Indeed, some of them are so commonplace that they don't draw attention. But it was not always so.

The late Warren G. Harding was, I believe, the first President to go on the air. There was the radio, of course, in the Wilson administration, but it was then in its infancy, and there were no national hook-ups.

If there had been, history might have been changed. Mr. Wilson could have stayed comfortably in Washington and appealed to the country to ratify his league without the rigors of the Western trip which broke him down.

* * *

CALM CAL

Coolidge was an infrequent broadcaster, but a good one. Calm, unemotional and not given to much gesticulation on the platform, Coolidge "went well" on the air.

His nasal twang carried well. There was a timbre in his voice that the air waves seemed to like.

He disliked crowds, too, so he was at his oratorical best in the quietude of the studio or his study in the White House.

* * *

Hoover was never at ease, either before a crowd or a microphone. He spoke fitfully, in jerks, and was exceedingly self-conscious.

Sometimes he stumbled badly. He could never lose that little panicky feeling that comes to one when he faces that "mike."

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Some people feel that old age pensions should not have been voted by the last Legislature. If there is one among you that harbors such an idea, I am sure that your views will change when you read the following from one of the letters I have received:

"I am 81 and you know that one at that age is practically helpless. If in the name of Almighty God, I receive that pension I can help myself a little! I know my time is short. I want to stay out of the poorhouse."

The letter was written by a woman unmarried and without loved ones.

The pension law was passed last January. The money is to be paid in December. The revenue for the payment of the pension was to be realized from liquor store profits. The liquor stores have not yielded the money that was anticipated, not nearly.

I wonder what will happen in December?

Hissing Auto Tire Does Snake to Death

WINSTED, Conn., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—A black snake met a "hsss" that was stronger than its own. The snake hissed at an automobile tire, sank its fangs into it—and was blown to death by the escaping air.

PAPAL PRINCE VISITS U. S.

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Alexis Cardinal Lepicier, a papal prince in charge of the affairs of the various orders of priests and nuns throughout the world, is a visitor in New York City today. The French prelate arrived on the Conte di Savoi to be greeted by an imposing array of church dignitaries.

After spending the night at the home of the Paulist fathers here, Cardinal Lepicier will continue to Portland, Ore., where he will preside at the Congress of the Servite Order, August 12 to 15.

Cantaloupes Grow Like Siamese Twins

Goose Crashes Windshield, 5 Hurt

HINGHAM, Mass., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—A large goose winged its more than 15 pounds through the windshield of an automobile, injuring the five occupants of the car.

The bird was killed, and five persons, all members of one family, were cut by flying glass. The fowl was one of a large flock crossing the road, and becoming startled flew into the air and hurtled through the heavy glass.

The injured were Mr. and Mrs. August de Coste, their two children, Harold, 12, and Evelyn, 10, and Patrick de Coste, father of August.

TROOPERS TO CO-OPERATE IN POLICE QUIZ HERE

NEW YORK Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Thoughts while strolling: Still a few international bankers at large. Senator Pat Harrison and Cecil B. DeMille look alike. I'm always getting the Rialto and Rivoli theaters mixed. Lillian Roth's dimple. Whatever became of vaudeville's "blue streak," Rae Samuels?

One word description of Warren William—brushy. Will someone teach department store elevator runners how to pronounce "lingerie?" And then call Billy Rose aside about his pronunciation of Cafe de Paris over the radio. Washington Square cops, too, need etiquette lessons. B. H. Rolfe is remindful of John Bunny.

White vests again, hey, hey! The prettily named new editor of Harper's Bazaar—Carmel Snow. The society folk at news reels Hendrik Willem Van Loon has rounded in, appropriate term, from the Orient. Thyra Samter Winslow sounds like a run down steps. Also: It smarts to be thrifty.

Nobody ever excited the tabloids like Daddy Browning. Does anyone ever actually know New York? Not more than a dozen theatrical press agents left. Overheard: "Maybe it would have been better if Columbus had not discovered the c o u n t r y!" Gene Tunney's twinkling expression.

One of my favorite people—Paul de Kruif. A singing comer on the radio—Jane Froman. George Jessel has shed the Gus Edwards juvenile look. Maybe those cigars age him. Ward Morehouse's quick Buddha grin. The overwhelming Central Park South skyline again. I'll stand and brood awhile.

* * *

Will Cuppy has been called the world's funniest writer by P. G. Wodehouse, who is to many the world's funniest writer. But the highlight of Cuppy's life was when he walked along Park avenue one day with Gene Tunney, when the latter was a champion. A car passed and a woman yelled, "Look, there's Will Cuppy!"

* * *

Nearly all the haphazard luncheon clubs that brought good fellows together in Wall street, the wholesale, jobbers and other districts as well as along Broadway have scattered. For years the motion picture folk collected in the Astor Hunting Room, Joe Weber and Lew Fields presided. The press agents grouped at Sardi's, the booking agents at Lindy's. Novelists at the Coffee House. Times have blown many lunchers to other cities, other jobs. The Dutch Treat still holds its luncheon of the literary crowd, but that is every Tuesday only.

Never in history have New York stores dealing in fishing paraphernalia had the enormous sales of this summer. While regulars have been among the purchasers, the bulk of increased sales comes from new disciples of Isaak Walton. Lay off actors who usually stood around Broadway curbs awaiting the breaks bought second hand cars, filled them with rods and reels. And found they could live more cheaply and healthfully angling than anything they ever did.

The newspaper paragraphers of another era were Tories of the news-rooms, distinct, aloof. They did not mingle. Elderly, expressing tarragon tastes, they had their bleak cubby-holes with a broken-down desk, paste-pot and shears. I know of only two still going—one a reader in a clipping bureau, the other a proofreader on a pulp western. They were fatalists who expected the inevitable, dismissal and genteel poverty. But they went over their horizons with a flourish. The old Morning Telegraph, a barney refuge for the journalistically forlorn, harbored a dozen white-haired paragraphers, putterers at petty tasks. In their opulence, they were deft in turning out three or four brightly minted lines with a Baconian dexterity smack at the dead-line.

One of the most evanescent figures in the theater has been the shy George Kelly. He did not mix with the theatrical crowds but instead, from suburban Philadelphia, turned out hit after hit such as "The Show Off." He would make no promises to producers, write as the spirit moved and spurned conferences. Then he evidently tired of it all and quit. Or playwrighting became too speculative.

Harold Ross is never completely at ease unless the offices of The New Yorker suggest a recent blow by a tornado. Always a new partition is going up or an old one coming down. The confusion is constant. James Thurber, coming in the other day and seeing fresh piles of disarray, tacked this sign on the bulletin board: "Alterations Going On As Usual During Business!"

SHIP WHISTLES FAREWELL AS PILOT DIES

Veteran River Captain Deaf to Steamer's Last Goodbye

CHARLEROI, Pa., Aug. 3.—At midnight the crack Jones and Laughlin Steel Company river steamer William Larimer Jones whistled "through" at Lock No. 4 on the Monongahela.

At his home on Lock 4 hill overlooking the locks, Capt. Thomas Cocain, 67, master of the William Larimer Jones, was fighting a losing battle against pneumonia.

Signaling its fleet call, the craft moved on down the river past the home of its pilot.

Capt. Cocain died at 3 a. m.

In a deep coma, Capt. Cocain, river pilot for 34 years, for the first time failed to recognize his craft's call. In the period of his two weeks' illness the substitute pilot of the William Larimer Jones had whistled on each infrequent trip a "goodnight" to the ailing captain.

Capt. Cocain started on the three rivers 46 years ago and was one of the best known pilots in the Pittsburgh district.

PROBERS MUM ON PART STATE WILL PLAY

Spotlight to Be Turned On Pension Fund And 'Politics'

The state police will co-operate in future hearings of the Police Research Commission, it was learned today.

The extent of the co-operation, it is understood, will be discussed at 5 p. m. at a meeting of the commission.

While members refused to discuss the type of aid the state will give, it was known that Sergt. John Tomek, of the Greensburg barracks, appeared prior to the hearing several days ago, conferred with members of the commission, and then departed. Maj. Lynn Adams, head of the state police, had been one of those originally invited to serve on the commission, but refused, due to lack of time, and recommended another.

TRAFFIC, PENSIONS

The group investigating the police, it is expected, will also lay out its future course. Traffic problems, the pension fund, political use of the police, kindred technical phases of police administration will form the basis for future hearings. Also to be settled is whether or not a list of witnesses, invited to appear before the commission without avail, will be subpened. Council has the power to order the subpenas, but the commission must first make the requests.

Those so far who failed to appear upon invitation include Police Supt. Ben B. Marshall, Charles Wolfe, William R. Miller, former police clerk; City Detective Stewart Dapp, Herman Friedman and others.

MARSHALL TO APPEAR

Supt. Marshall, who has been ill, signified his intention of appearing when he has recovered, and probably will not be subpened in the event Council decides to serve the others.

Council meets again August 27. It also will have to decide whether or not the $5,000 appropriation for technical assistance will be passed over the veto of Mayor William N. McNair. The money is to be used for surveys, payment of an expert such as Bruce Smith, who was suggested by Maj. Adams and fees to Attorney Dennis J. Mulvihill and Secretary Meyer Sanders, employed by the commission. Members of the commission have refused to consider remuneration for themselves.

CHILDREN CRY FOR FLAPJACKS

Now that the chef and camp director is known to be an expert pancake cook, children at the Volunteers of America's Wildwood Health Farm clamor for more pancakes.

He is William Cholley, a chef for 10 years, and he learned the art of pancake making in Lebanon, Pa., where Mayor McNair's favorite dish, schnitz and knepp, was born.

But Cholley doesn't pretend to be a schnitz and knepp authority. Pancakes are his specialty, he says, although the menu for lunch yesterday was fish cake, pound cake, milk, cole slaw, and "jelly pieces."

Children at the camp the other day established what Cholley believes to be some kind of a record—and so did he.

He began to cook pancakes, and all 75 of the children, like Oliver Twist, asked for more. Altogether, before he had routed their pancake hunger, Cholley reports, he cooked 750 pancakes. And this was all "hand work," beating up the batter and frying the luscious cakes on a small hot plate. He is thinking now, he says, if the demand for pancakes continues, of asking for a mechanical mixer.

Tufts In Capital On Slum-Clearance

Joseph P. Tufts, executive director of the Pittsburgh Housing Association, was in Washington today to discuss with government officials steps to be taken in the slum-clearance program in Pittsburgh.

The decision of Judge Samuel H. West, of Cleveland, upholding the government's purchases of land for low-cost housing has stimulated conferences held to consider slum-clearance, Tufts said before leaving Pittsburgh yesterday.

Two Seek Divorces, Desertion Charged

Divorce suits were filed by William Paul Hamilton, of 722 Excelsior street, Mt. Oliver, against Lillian Hamilton, of Mt. Washington, and by Virginia May Bleichner, 305 Kathleen street, against James L. Bleichner, Canfield street, alleging desertion.

BALK SUSPECT IN COURT FIGHT

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Aug. 3.—James E. Metterling, of Mapleton, accused of Minnesota bank robberies, was spirited out of Huntingdon County and today was en route west in custody of police.

First arrested July 11 as a fugitive he "beat the rap" when 27 witnesses testified he was in Pennsylvania at the time of the robbery. After his release, another robbery charge was filed and he was refused a habeas corpus writ. The Superior Court upheld the County Court and before an appeal to the Supreme Court could be filed Metterling was spirited out of the county.

Reformed Church Group Elects Head

LANCASTER, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The Rev. Allen S. Meek, of York, was elected president of the Spiritual Conference of Ministers and Laymen of the Reformed Church in the United States yesterday.

Other officers elected: Secretary, the Rev. Carl Roseberg, Baltimore, Md.; treasurer, the Rev. Edward A. Keen, York. A vice president will be named today.

Trustees Named For Two Terms

J. R. Patrick and J. Regis Waltham yesterday were named permanent trustees of the Hyde Park Brewing Company, Hyde Park, Westmoreland County. Pending a hearing August 23, W. J. Johnston was appointed temporary trustee of the National Erie Company, of Erie, Pa.

Sons Left $20,000 By Thrifty Mother

A lifetime of thrift was revealed today when the will of Mrs. Katrina Bender, 4204 Eden way, was filed for probate.

She left $20,000 to her three sons by a previous marriage. She bequeathed all of her stocks to her son, Emil Kaehl, and the residue to Emil, Charles and Herman Kaehl.

Disdaining the descent offered by a handy telephone pole, the feline acrobat climbed over it, and crept along 40 feet above Arlington avenue, her left front and hind claws gripping one strand, and her right legs clutching the other.

When help arrived the cat startled the spectators below by leaping from the cables to a nearby tree. Enthusiasm mounted as she swung to the topmost branch of the tree, beyond reach of her rescuers.

There they were forced to leave the frightened animal clinging to a wavering branch.

McNair to Talk At Homewood Church

The Rev. E. J. Guy, pastor of the Nazarene Baptist Church, Tioga street, Homewood, has announced that Mayor McNair will be the principal speaker at the congregation's meeting to be held in the church at 8:45 p. m. Sunday. Van A. Barrickman, attorney and one-time bitter enemy of McNair's, will also be on the program.

Charges Bus Line Equipment Unsafe

Attorney John E. Graham, of Butler, appearing before the Public Service Commission yesterday, declared that buses operated between Pittsburgh and upstate points by the Harmony Short Line and Welsh Bus Company are so dilapidated and unsafe that public safety is jeopardized.

He cited the case of two passengers slightly injured last Saturday when a Pittsburgh-Butler bus was unable to hold the road, he claimed, because of its overcrowded condition.

DENNY FAVORS TRACTION POST

Harmar D. Denny, Jr., former safety director, will take Charles A. Finley's job as chairman of the Traction Conference Board, if City Council will give it to him, the Mayor said.

Denny accepted the Mayor's offer to name him to the post in a telephone conversation with Public Safety Director A. Marshal Bell yesterday from Muncy, Pa., McNair said.

Denny's appointment was then placed with the city clerk for action by Council. McNair stated:

"Denny is going after the job."

Previously the Mayor had said he believed Council was about to weaken in its stand against Finley's ousting.

10 Prizes Offered For Airport Models

Ten winners of the airport model-building contest, held by the Pennsylvania Airlines and Transport Company, will be awarded trips to the national air races in Cleveland.

Models of any airport along the route from Washington to Milwaukee may be entered in the contest.

First prize is an all-expense trip to the races for the four-day program, with transportation by air. Second prize is an all-expense trip on the final day of the races. The eight other winners will be presented free round trips by air to Cleveland at any time during the races.

Minister's Widow Dies in Duquesne

Mrs. Carrie Wilcox Mead died today in her home, 8 Normand street, Duquesne. She was the widow of Dr. Wesley G. Mead, late Methodist minister of Duquesne.

Mrs. Mead leaves two sons, Dr. Gilbert W. Mead and Charles A. Mead, and a daughter, Mrs. William J. Osborne, with whom she lived. Funeral services will be at 2 p. m. Sunday at the home. Burial will be in Grandview Cemetery, East McKeesport, Monday.

WAR STARTS ON LIQUOR 'CLUBS'

Deputy Attorney General John M. Walker announced today that liquor license revocations against nine clubs would be started in Quarter Sessions Court next week, with dissolution of 50 other chartered clubs sought by the attorney.

The Deputy Attorney General's statement heralds the opening of the state's campaign against the chartered club "racket", which, authorities assert, has resulted in repeal speakeasies. Three hotels and three restaurants also face possible loss of their liquor licenses in the proceedings which will be filed in Quarter Sessions Court.

Walker declared:

"We are going to eliminate the one-man club racket. Clubs with photostatic copies of the original charters and clubs with purchased charters will be among those to be hit.

"Legitimate hotels and restaurants pay $600 for their liquor licenses and should be protected from competition by the one-man clubs, which pay only $50 for their licenses."

Six Arrested As Police Seize Dope

Hearings were to be held today for four men and two women arrested in a raid at 326 East Larock street by Inspector Walter Kaiser and Lieut. John Jones.

Police reported finding morphine in the house. Florence Wilson, 46, was charged with keeping a disorderly house and violating the narcotic law. Raymond King, 37, also of that address, was charged with violating the narcotic law and visiting a disorderly house. Police held three other men and another woman on charges of visiting a disorderly house.

Daughter Finds Father Hanged

John K. Middlemiss, 72, of 608 Neil street, West Homestead, was found hanging in a front room of his home yesterday by his daughter, Sarah Middlemiss, when she returned home after being absent during the day, according to the morgue.

Police said Middlemiss has been in ill health for two years and was known to have had weak spells. He was a retired blacksmith, formerly connected with the Mesta Machine Company.

SWIMMING STAR BUYS DOG ORCHESTRA

Lenore Kight Adds Own Souvenir Of Detroit Meet After Winning Three Medals

She explains that she began her dog collection as a hobby about a year after she started to swim, in 1928. She buys at least one new dog as a souvenir of every town she visits.

Lenore returned this week from triumphs in the women's senior nationals, known as the American outdoor championships for women, in Detroit.

There her victories included first places in the 440, 880 and mile swims. Her official rewards were three gold medals.

Only one dog in the Kight home doesn't belong to Lenore. That's the small iron Boston bull pup who holds open the front door on warm days. He's her father's pet.

Several of Lenore's teammates are also making souvenir collections. Louise Clark is another dog fancier and Anna May Gorman likes dolls.

Long Picking Up Battle Dropped By Andy Jackson

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Gen. Huey Long is picking up the Battle of New Orleans where Andy Jackson left off.

He is opposed by Gen. Walmsley, who is Mayor of New Orleans when Gen. Long ain't around.

Walmsley has sixteen hundred police in back of him while Gen. Long depends on the militia, which has never lost a postponed battle yet.

Like the trouble in Vienna, the contest will be for the radio station. The winner will broadcast until he gets a commercial sponsor.

Gen. Long has infantry, cavalry and artillery and is doing some propaganda among the Boy Scouts.

The Campfire Girls are still neutral.

GEORGE MILLER COMFORTING RESCUED DOG

Many Persons Treated for Hydrophobia Without Cause, Says Humane Society Official

Those connected with animal rescue work contend that rabies is not a seasonal sickness; that it does not increase with the heat of summer. And that dogs suspected of having the disease, upon examination, usually do not have even the symptoms.

In fact, J. Robb Snyder, of the Animal Rescue League, revealed today that there were two cases last February and one in January, and none so far this summer, making only three cases this year.

William F. H. Wentzel, of the Humane Society of Western Pennsylvania, said many people have been treated for hydrophobia when it has not been proved that they have been bitted by a rabid dog. He also said that some people, rather than take the chance of becoming sick from the serum, refuse treatment and trust that they have not been bitten by a diseased dog. Wentzel cited several cases where the after-effects were serious.

Model Airplane Race at County Fair!

By J. JAMES MOORE
Pittsburgh Wing Commander

Our next event will be a model airplane racing contest, to be held some time during the County Fair at South Park, which runs from August 28 to September 3.

It will be the most spectacular model contest ever held here. It will be held on the athletic field—same spot where our recent derby was held—over a 132-foot course.

Thousands of spectators who will witness the event will see one of the most thrilling and exciting contests for boys and girls ever held in Western Pennsylvania.

They will see these little planes built by you members go at flashing speed—40 to 65 miles an hour—from a minature runway and down the field between red flags.

I will tell you about the prizes, the rules and how to build one of these speedy planes in just a few days.

We are also hoping to hold a fuselage model contest. So watch the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and I'll have a "plane load" of news for you!

Sunday Column Only!

Beginning Sunday the birdmen column will appear in the Sunday Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph only and not in the daily paper as at present.

The new Sunday birdmen feature will no doubt be heartily welcomed by every boy and girl.

We are planning a special birdmen story, however, for this coming Wednesday concerning the South Park model racing contest.

Air Dictionary
List Number 32

This list contains a group of definitions of various types of floats. It is important to know each type when studying and discussing water craft.

FLIER—One who flys. Same as aviator. Also spelled "flyer."

FLIGHT—A trip in an aircraft.

FLOAT (GENERAL)—A completely enclosed watertight structure attached to an aircraft to give it buoyancy and stability when it contacts with water.

FLOAT (INBOARD STABILIZING)—A stabilizing float placed close to the main float or hull.

FLOAT (OUTBOARD STABILIZING)—A stabilizing float placed far out from the main float or hull, usually at or very near the tip of the wing. Sometimes called a "wing-tip" float.

FLOAT (SINGLE)—A central float fitted under a seaplane, usually requiring two stabilizing floats to give adequate stability and complete float system.

FLOAT (STABILIZING) — A float used in addition to a single float or hull and intended to provide lateral stability while the seaplane or flying boat is at rest on the water. There are inboard and outboard stabilizing floats (which see).

FLOAT SYSTEM — The complete system of permanent floats, used to give buoyancy and stability to a seaplane or a flying boat while it is in contact with water, or to provide hydrodynamic lift while it is taking off.

FLOATATION GEAR — An emergency gear which, when attached to a land plane, permits it to land and float on water.

In response to many letters sent to wing headquarters asking whether the word "flier" or "flyer" is of correct use when referring to one who flies, the definition above gives a complete answer. Both are proper, as you will note in Webster's Revised Dictionary.

BUS COMPANY FACES POLICE THREAT

The Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company is faced with police intervention by orders from Mayor McNair on August 15 if it doesn't cut its 25-cent fare on the Highland Park route to 15 cents.

McNair yesterday announced that he will "have the police on the streets August 15 to see that they (the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company) don't charge more."

The Mayor said that the company will have to get an injunction against him to prevent his use of police.

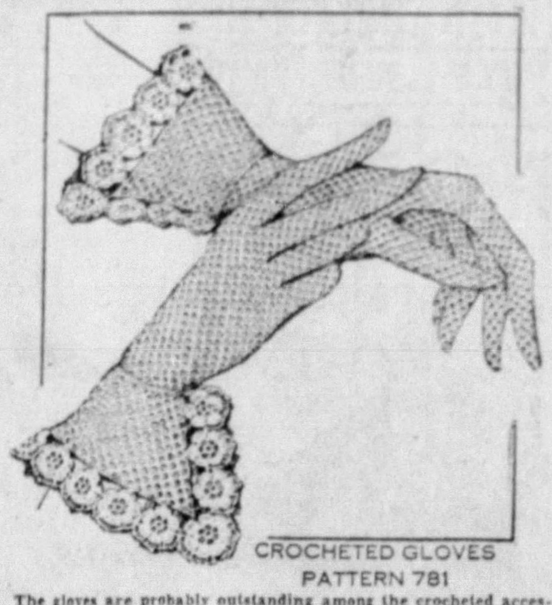
Claiming the right under an act of Assembly to regulate bus operation in the city, the Mayor yesterday notified the coach company to reduce its fare. In a letter to the company he ordered that the reduction become effective August 15.

HIGHWAY WORK UP TO COUNTY

If the County Commissioners will agree to pay property damages, the State Highway Department, it was learned today, will widen Perry Highway for four-lane traffic to a point within two miles of Wexford. The proposal has been laid before the commissioners, and may be acted upon at their next meeting.

Agreement already has been reached between the county and state for the widening of Perry Highway from Perrysville to a point 1,700 feet beyond the Highland school, a stretch of about two miles. The new proposal would involve the construction of approximately two miles more of four-lane roadway.

LAURA WHEELER DESIGNS



CROCHETED GLOVES
PATTERN 781

The gloves are probably outstanding among the crocheted accessories that Dame Fashion has singled out as her favorites. And why shouldn't they be when they are so choice in design and so flattering to the wearer? This gauntlet cuff, open at the side, is trimmed with flat rosebuds that form a dainty border. The entire glove is of a plain mesh that is easy to make and has that daintiness that makes the hand-crocheted glove so flattering. Though expensive in appearance, these gloves cost very little to make. They are also the sort of accessory that adds the smart touch to the evening costume any season.

Pattern 781 comes to you with complete directions for making the glove shown in three different sizes, small, medium and large; material requirements; illustration of the gloves and of all stitches used.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS :-: By PAUL MALLON

Old 'Squeeze Play' Worked by Hull On Russians

Mr. Mallon

The one worked on Russia this week was a gem. It was really only the old-fashioned squeeze play, but it was dressed up with some novel innovations so that no one would recognize it.

George Peek staged it. He announced with an innocent look on his face that his second import bank was ready for bigger things. It would, he said, expand its operations beyond Cuba to finance the sale of American goods for all the world, that is, all the world except Russia. The Red trade problem was to be handled by the first bank.

That stunned the Russians. They are almost as sensitive diplomatically as the Japanese. Such discrimination against them would ordinarily be considered an affront. They came into the State Department on the run.

There, State Secretary Hull greeted them with his best poker face. He said, and repeated twice, that he had not read Mr. Peek's announcement either before or after it was written.

He left the impression that he was, perhaps, angry that Mr. Peek had acted without informing him.

PINCERS

Mr. Hull probably never told a fib in his life and he did not this time, but, if the Russians had looked on his, or a nearby desk, they might have been able to find, under a pile of papers, a copy of the Peek report. It had been there for some time. Apparently, Mr. Hull had not got around to reading it. You know how those things are. A man should read only what is good for him to read.

It stumped the Russians. They knew darned well they were being affronted, but it was all so indirect, and the state secretary denied any connection with it.

Before long, they caught on to the fact that they had better get busy immediately and resume negotiations about settlement of the Czarist and Kerensky debts if they wanted any of Mr. Peek's financial help.

The very next day, the Russians resumed debt negotiations.

PLAN

The way the play was worked out on the inside was this:

Mr. Hull's good friend and assistant, Walton Moore, is a director of Mr. Peek's bank. Likewise Mr. Moore is in charge of Russian debt negotiations. In that second capacity, he has not had much to do lately. The Russians have been slothful on debt negotiations for many months.

Those debts were contracted by previous Russian governments which used the money to fight against the very men controlling Russia today. You could hardly expect the Reds to be eager about paying for guns and bullets which shot them down. They have repudiated similar debts to France.

Consequently, they have been ducking the payment issue for weeks by insisting that they get a cash loan as a price for settling the debt. They asserted M. Litvinoff got the impression from Mr. Roosevelt that Russia would be given a cash loan.

Our boys have always insisted Mr. Roosevelt never gave Litvinoff such an impression. Early negotiations in Moscow broke down on that point and were transferred here. Mr. Hull is supposed to have informed the Russian ambassador, Troyanovsky, that, if negotiations were to continue, Russia would have to stop asking impossible things, chief of which was the cash loan. Furthermore, Hull said, the export-import bank would not function for Russia until there was a debt settlement. Mr. Troyanovsky said he would have to ask his government about that.

It was while Mr. Troyanovsky was asking his government that Mr. Peek made his announcement with the double meaning.

NOTES

Mr. Roosevelt planned to break the tree-belt drought yarn in his coming western speeches, but authorities here rushed to make it public because of the need for drought relief news . . . You might believe, from Navy Secretary Swanson's advocacy of a 20 per cent naval cut, that Mr. Swanson has gone pacifist. Hardly. He could safely have advocated a 100 per cent naval cut, as there is no chance of any cut being accepted . . . Some of Prof. Tugwell's friends are advising him not to use such big words as "obscurantist" in his speeches. They point to the way Agriculture Secretary Wallace is going around sleeveless to hog killings, and suggest that Tugwell do likewise . . . Any numbskull among public officials is now known as a "glumpf." There are several glumpfs here.

SEVERAL GRAPE JELLY RECIPES SUGGESTED

RIPE GRAPE CONSERVE—3 cups (1½ pounds) prepared fruit, 5 cups (2¼ pounds) sugar, 1 cup nut meats, finely chopped, ½ pound seeded raisins, and ½ bottle fruit pectin.

To prepare fruit, stem and crush thoroughly about 2 pounds fully ripe grapes. Add ¼ cup water and simmer, covered, 30 minutes. With tight-skinned grapes, add juice of 1 lemon to water. Sieve hot mixture.

Measure sugar into large kettle. Add nuts, raisins, and prepared fruit, filling up last cup with water if necessary. Mix well and bring to a full rolling boil over hottest fire. Stir constantly before and while boiling. Boil hard 1 minute. Remove from fire and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Then stir and skim by turns for just 5 minutes to cool slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot, conserve at once. Makes about nine glasses. (6 fluid ounces each).

* * *

CONCORD GRAPE JELLY—4 cups (2 lbs.) juice, 7½ cups (3¼ lbs.) sugar and ½ bottle fruit pectin.

To prepare juice, stem about 3 pounds of fully ripe grapes and crush thoroughly. Add ½ cup water, bring to a boil, cover and simmer 10 minutes. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice. (If Malagas or other tight-skinned grapes are used, the juice of 1 lemon should be added to prepared juice.)

Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add bottled fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once. Makes about 11 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

* * *

CHERRY JELLY
(Except Wild Cherry or Chokecherry.)

3 cups (1½ lbs.) juice, 6½ cups (2¾ lbs.) sugar and 1 bottle fruit pectin.

To prepare juice, stem and crush about 3 pounds fully ripe cherries. Do not pit. Add ½ cup water, bring to a voil, cover, and simmer 10 minutes. (For stronger cherry flavor add ½ teaspoon almond extract before pouring.) Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice.

Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to a full rolling boil ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin immediately. Makes about 9 glasses (6 fluid ounces each).

* * *

RED RASPBERRY JELLY

4 cups (2 lbs.) juice, 7½ cups (3¼ lbs.) sugar and 1 bottle fruit pectin.

To prepare juice crush thoroughly or grind about 3 quarts fully ripe berries. Place in jelly cloth or bag and squeeze out juice.

Measure sugar and juice into large saucepan and mix. Bring to a boil over hottest fire and at once add fruit pectin, stirring constantly. Then bring to full rolling boil and boil hard ½ minute. Remove from fire, skim, pour quickly. Paraffin and cover immediately. Makes about 11 glasses (6 fluid onces each).

* * *

PICKLED CHERRIES — 4 pounds of pitted cherries, 4 pounds of sugar, vinegar to cover, and cinnamon sticks. Put cherries into a bowl and cover with vinegar. Let stand over night. In the morning drain them, and stir in the sugar. Let stand until sugar is dissolved. Put into sterilized canning jars with a few sticks of cinnamon and seal the jars.

* * *

CHERRY PUDDING RIVIERA —½ cup of sugar, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, ¾ cup of shortening, ½ cup of milk, 2 egg yolks, beaten, 2 egg whites, beaten, 1½ cups flour, 2½ cups pitted cherries. Cream shortening and sugar, add beaten egg yolks; sift together flour and baking powder and add alternately with milk. Fold in beaten egg whites. Cover a deep dish with the cherries, pour the batter over and steam one hour. Serve with a sauce made with cherry juice.

The Quintuplets: Their Home a Tourists' Mecca

MRS. OVILIA DIONNE, 26, AND HER FIVE LITTLE BABY GIRLS. . . . MOTORISTS: "WHERE DO THE QUINTUPLETS LIVE?"

ERUPTIONS OVER SAYS PRIEST

CAMP AGFA, Alaska, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—A possible end to the recent extreme activity of hundreds of volcanoes along the 1,800-mile stretch of the Alaska Peninsula and the Aleutian Island chains, was regarded today by Father Bernard Hubbard, famed "glacier priest."

Father Hubbard and his party of young scientists have recovered from the hazardous trip to the Aghileen pinnacles, where they discovered a huge new volcano crater, larger than famed Aniakchak, hitherto regarded as the world's largest.

Father Hubbard said he did not look for any major eruptions for several years along the Alaska Peninsula or Aleutian volcanic chain.

MAN, WIFE HURT AS AUTO SKIDS

Knights to Hold Picnic August 12

The annual picnic of Pittsburgh Council No. 491, Knights of Columbus is to be held Sunday, August 12 at the Dells, Wildwood road. The chairman of the picnic, Charles H. Carran, has arranged a program of music, dancing and mushball games.

Quintuplets Attract Hundreds to Canada

Babies' Birthplace Mecca For Tourists

CALLANDER, Ont., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The famous Dionne quintuplets who have smashed all sorts of records in multiple birth history have made a mecca for tourists of the Callander-Corbeil district.

Hundreds pass through the city of North Bay daily. They write to the home folks from this Northern Ontario region much as did a visitor from Wisconsin today, who inscribed, "we are camping five miles from the birthplace of the quintuplets."

People don't ask the distance to villages or towns. They want to know "how far to where the quintuplets live and which way do we go?"

Many visitors call at the home of the Dr. A. R. Dafoe, the country practioner who has brought the five babies safely through 65 days of life, longer than any other known set of quintuplets have existed.

Dr. Dafoe says four physicians, on an average, call upon him daily. They ask to see the babies, but he cannot grant that request.

Up and down the neat gravel road between Callander and Corbeil passes an ever-increasing stream of automobiles. They stop opposite the Dionne farm, and occupants gaze toward the little frame house where the quintuplets rest in their incubators.

JIBE IN M'ADOO CASE SCANNED

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 2.—(AP.)—Hearing on a motion to strike from court records certain statements by Frank C. Collier, presiding judge of the Superior Court, about the 42-minute divorce recently obtained by Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo from Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, was assigned late today to Judge Stanley Murray from Mercer County. The date for the hearing was not fixed.

Judge Collier, in commenting on the divorce, said he intended to check the methods by which it was obtained to determine if there was any irregularity.

Judge Charles L. Bogue, before whom the hearing was scheduled yesterday, declined to handle it, and referred it to Judge Collier. The latter sent it to the calendar department for assignment.

NYE TO OPPOSE MRS. LANGER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Senator Nye, Independent Republican, said today he would support the Democratic nominee for Governor of North Dakota rather than Mrs. William Langer, wife of the deposed Governor.

Langer on Wednesday resigned the Republican nomination. The Republican State Committee, which he controls, indorsed Mrs. Langer to succeed him on the ticket. Langer received the nomination two days after he had been convicted of fraud against the federal government. He has appealed an 18-month sentence and a fine of $10,000.

Nye declared:

"I consider it my duty in the light of the principles involved to hope and work for the election of Tom Moodie. Moodie is the Democratic nominee.

Beat well, fold in beaten whites, pour in buttered molds and steam one and one half hours.

DEATH CLAIMS SPORTSMAN

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Joseph Harriman, 35, noted sportsman, was dead here today, a pneumonia victim. Harriman's father, the late Joseph Harriman, was a brother of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt.

He served during the war in the Marine Corps. Except for a short time as a banker, he devoted himself to sport, being particularly fond of golf, shooting and tennis.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m., tomorrow, at his home, Elm Tree cottage, in Newport, R. I.

Many Nutrition Elements In Frankfurters

Supplies Protein and Mineral Substances Essential to Normal Growth; Digestive Upset May Occur Only When Eaten in Unreasonable Quantity

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

While the inventor of the nationally known "hot dog" or frankfurter is no longer with us, his memory is immortalized in this popular food. The frankfurter was first put on the market in a mid-western amusement park. It met with great success and its popularity quickly spread. Today, it is a food known and relished by hundreds of thousands of people.

Frankfurters are generally made of lean chopped beef or pork, or both of these meats. Spices are blended in the mixture to give additional flavor. The meat is put into narrow casings and smoked. Like sausage, they are manufactured under hygienic conditions; only pure and wholesome ingredients are used.

The casings used for frankfurters are made from the alimentary tract of animals. They are edible and easily digested when carefully chewed.

CONTAIN PROTEINS

Frankfurters are especially palatable and tempting. They supply protein and mineral elements. These food substances are essential to normal growth and development. Protein is not stored in the body and its supply, therefore, must be continuously replenished. It is first acted upon by the stomach, and from there digestion is continued in the intestines.

Protein is absorbed into the blood from the intestinal walls. Its chief purpose is to build new tissue and replace old and wornout tissue. Vim and vigor are dependent upon this builder of healthy tissue.

Mineral elements, which are contained in frankfurters, are known as body regulators. They aid the body in maintaining a normal exchange of body fluids. These substances neutralize any tendency of the body toward acidity. Proper bone and tooth development are dependent upon a sufficient supply of minerals. They form the basis of normal blood formation in the body.

APPEALS TO TASTE

Though the frankfurter contains much the same nutritional elements found in other meats, its primary appeal is to the taste. It stimulates the appetite and gastric juices and is easily digested. But, of course, when it is hastily eaten and in unreasonable quantity, digestive upset may occur.

The frankfurter may be served with many foods and lends variety to the menu. With vegetables and salads it makes a delicious main dish for luncheon or dinner. It is a favorite dish with salads during warm weather. Another advantage is the ease in preparation.

The picnic is more of a success when this food is included. Ball games, circuses and other places of amusement are made even more enjoyable when this delicious and tasty food is available. It is an all-American food.

3 DIE AT POLLS IN TENNESSEE

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Bullets flew with ballots in Tennessee yesterday. Three men were killed in election quarrels; Gov. Hill McAlister and Senator K. D. McKellar were renominated.

Gov. McAlister, direct descendant of two Tennessee chief executives, defeated Lewis S. Pope, Nashville lawyer, for the Democratic nomination for Governor. Senator McKellar ran away from Dr. John R. Neal for the nomination for a six-year term in the Senate.

Beecher Phillips, 17, shot to death in Anderson County. A deputy sheriff was wounded.

Chief of Engineers Stricken on Coast

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of United States engineers, was under a physician's care today recuperating from a collapse brought on by overexertion.

Dr. Homer P. Rush, of Portland, said Gen. Markham's tour across the continent climaxed by an arduous tramp along central Oregon streams, brought on the collapse.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

End of 'Rush' Is Puzzling To Platinum Blonde

FELL FOR HIM, at FIRST SIGHT. And at first everything was MILK and HONEY. He, with her, at all hours. And dancing and eating and chatting.

But NOW it is another story. EVENTS, too thick and furious, have simmered almost to nothingness. What shall she do?

Dear Miss Brunot:

I have been a constant reader of your Speak Up, Sisters column, and cannot express just how much I enjoy it. This is the first time I have gotten up enough courage to write to you. But here goes:

Miss Brunot

About a month ago I attended a dance where I met a young man whom I fell for at sight. We danced and had a wonderful evening at this banquet dance. Afterwards he escorted me home and was anxious to see me again. I gave him my telephone number and said it was O. K. for him to phone whenever he cared to do so. For about a week he called me every evening.

He has to work late and it was inconvenient for him to come out. He later made appointments and we would go out together earlier. We dined and danced and certainly I enjoyed his company. He was as nice as could be. In our conversation, I discovered he was 26, I am 20. After our appointment that evening he called several times, but hasn't made any further appointment to take me out, and a month has gone by.

PUZZLED AT ACTIONS

I can't understand this, for I have always been considered very neat, well dressed and pretty. Of course he paid me compliments and I accepted them smiling. I might mention when in his company, I forgot a small article of mine, and he still has it.

I phoned twice and spoke with him. He thanked me for calling, and said he would return this article. What puzzles me, Miss Brunot, is why he should rush me and want to go steady with me, and then on our first time out together, make it our last. I will be grateful for your reply.

A PLATINUM BLONDE.

Swiftly running waters pass much land, sister . . . That is my answer. Perhaps he rushes other platinum blondes, too. A girl must be very tactful when she is the type that attracts quickly . . . Very severe cases often pass off as soon as they arrive . . . Do you know anything at all about the character and habits of this young man?

Maybe his actions toward you were the sort of actions he indulges in frequently . . . or again he may be so busy with his work that he can't arrange to see you . . . Wait awhile, and do not call him . . . the very fact he called you so arduously at first shows he is plenty capable to do his own pursuing . . . A fellow of that type invariably balks at aid . . .

Don't set too much upon your appearance . . . neatness, good clothes and prettiness carry a girl a certain distance. But not the whole way . . . Character, gentleness, sweetness, adaptability, lack of too much personal conceit. All these decide a man in continuing his attentions . . .

AUNT OBJECTS

Fifteen, and popular with the boys. But she has to live with her relatives, and her aunt, having no children of her own, is rather severe in her beliefs about what young people should do . . . She doesn't even like BOYS to walk HOME with her niece . . . So Leora is having her difficulties.

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am 15, and popular with the boys . . . I don't go with a steady fellow, but just like all of them . . . Our family is very unfortunate by having to live with our relatives. My aunt, not having any children of her own, is very much against the idea of boys walking home with me from shows and other places . . . My parents allow me to have boy friends, and I am allowed to have them at the house . . . The question is what shall I do about these boys walking home with me?

My relations usually sit on the front porch where they are sure to see me and my friends. My father says drop them at the corner. But I think that looks bad . . . I scarcely have the nerve to speak to these boys, either, about this . . . They are liable not to bother with me again . . . Miss Brunot, please help me. LEONA.

I feel very sorry, Leona, that you don't have your own home where you can listen only to your parents, and their way of living. . . Your father seems to be a man who follows the path of least resistance, and his advice is along that line, sister . . . I agree with you, though, that it doesn't look well for a girl to shake her escorts at the corner.

You must remember, sister, if you are under someone else's roof, you must conform more or less to their habits, or if not, you must use considerable tact to win them to your way of thinking . . . Why not make more of a confidante of this aunt? Get her interested in your social activities . . . manage that the boys notice her . . . Maybe she will have a change of heart. She seems to have plenty of character, and having her for an ally wouldn't be a bad idea. . . .

PORCHES EMPTY

Dear Miss Brunot:

We are daily readers and are 21, attractively dressed, well educated, and are privileged to entertain our friends. But still our porches are always empty. We are fond of sports, enjoy dances and parties. Many of our friends tell us we are too nice. Do you think so?

At the present time we both are very fond of a certain pair of boys. But they only say "Hello," and pass by. What shall we do?

HEART BROKEN PALS.

There is a quality in some people of being ALMOST TOO NICE . . . It has been called NASTY NICE. One must never thrust their ideas of conduct down others' throats. Neither must one have a condescending attitude towards others . . .

To win young men's attentions and to fill your porches with suitors, I would suggest being interested in others in a wholesome way . . . and not making yourselves the centers of everything . . . I have seen beautiful homes empty, and homely little hovels overcrowded. And why? Merely because the genuine spirit of comradeship was there . . . There is no wisdom in girls being hoydenish or rough . . . or in making themselves common through undue familiarites. But on the other side, stand-offishness, prudishness, a superior manner get them nothing. . .

Let not the SPIRIT OF MORTAL BE PROUD . . .

FAY KING ADVISES GIRLS WHO STALK "HAPPY HUNTING GROUNDS"

By FAY KING.

Le us suppose that a girl's object in going to business is matrimony, which business career offers the best opportunity for marriage?

Attractive men, many single and good spenders, patronize the flower shops, candy stores, and theater ticket branches. Here a pretty girl contacts men that would interest most matrimonially minded young "spinsters."

What is the difficulty in these happy hunting grounds for husbands?

The men may be jolly and flattering but this is only because the other girls have put them into this radiant mood.

It is impossible to make an impression upon any man while he is completely captivated by another.

We must consider some other careers.

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Proper Posture Is a Factor in Good Health

In a recent pamphlet issued by the New York Academy of Medicine, poor posture is defined as a fault in the disposition of the parts of the body. Faulty posture is a frequent occurrence in childhood. Doctors who specialize in this work believe that if good posture in childhood could be enforced, many constitutional disorders would be avoided.

Dr. Copeland

Faulty posture can often be traced to negligence in early infancy and childhood. Frequently the young infant is allowed to walk too soon. During infancy the body is rapidly growing and the muscles of the legs have not fully developed.

For this reason the infant requires many hours of sleep and rest. To prevent faulty posture, the growing child should not be subjected to undue muscular activity and strain. He should not be permitted to walk until his muscles are strong.

The young mother is always anxious to see her child sit and walk as early as possible. In her eagerness she encourages it. This may prove harmful to the baby learning to walk while the muscles are still undeveloped. It sometimes leads to knock-knee, bowleg, pigeon toe and other defects that bring about faulty posture in later life.

Of course, faulty posture may be the result of rickets, poor hygiene, faulty nutrition, mental overstrain, enlarged tonsils or centers of infection in the body. It may follow convalescence from an infectious and weakening disease. Serious deformities, such an curvature of the spine and other bone and joint conditions, result from faulty posture.

In all cases it is important that the underlying disturbance be corrected whenever possible and the necessary measures taken for posture training. Most schools conduct special courses in proper posture as part of the physical training program.

Occasionally it may be necessary for the child to have special forms of exercise. The exercise and instruction should be continued at home and every effort made to co-operate with school and health authorities in overcoming any physical defects.

In adults, poor posture may be caused by occupational overstrain, or mental and emotional distress. Here, too, it can be traced to negligence. At times these persons may actually complain of pain. They are amazed to discover the improvement in health when the posture is corrected.

Relax as you walk and never slump forward with your shoulders rounded and your arms dangling in front of you. The chest wall should be well-arched forward, the stomach in, the head upright, with chin in and the spine straight. You will be amazed to discover how much easier breathing becomes and how much better you feel when good posture is maintained.

Answers to Health Queries

R. M. Q.—What would cause swelling of the feet and ankles? My general health is good.

A.—This may be due to several causes. Make sure that the system is kept clear. For full particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

If whole cauliflowers are tied in muslin before cooking they will not break, and are easier to serve. The muslin can be used over and over again for the same purpose.

To prevent and remove water and steam marks from painted walls, dry the walls thoroughly and rub over with a rag moistened with linseed oil. This will also preserve the paint.

When making short curtains of net, insert a piping cord when hemming the sides. This will prevent them from stretching and sagging after they have been washed.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Return the Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—In case of an annulment of the marriage within three or four days of the wedding, would it be proper to return the wedding and shower gifts?

1—Yes, this would seem to be the sensitive and proper thing to do. The logic would be that since there is no marriage, there would be no wedding gifts—so, as wedding gifts, they would be returned to the givers, and thereby canceled, as much as possible.

Winners Keepers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a guest of honor at a bridge party to accept both the bridge prize and the guest prize?

I contend that when playing for a prize, whether guest of honor or otherwise, if your score is high that you should receive the prize, and the giving of a guest prize is entirely up to the hostess. F.

I agree with you—thoroughly. When, as the guest of honor, you have the highest score, you should receive the prize intended for the highest score. And the giving of a guest prize is "something else again," entirely a separate factor from the prize for points.

Contract Bridge :: HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

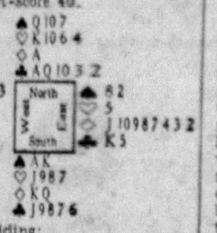
Attack and Counter-Attack

The best line of counter-attack against an Opening Pre-emptive or semi-Pre-emptive bid is often difficult to decide, particularly when a hand is one only fairly strong in honors and these honors in short suits. Sometimes a player is driven by the exigencies of such a situation to the making of a bid which appears radically unsound but actually upon analysis is found to be eminently correct. Take the situation always recurring in Rubber Bridge where one side has a part-score, use every reasonable means to defend it. They know that they have their opponents at a disadvantage and that often great penalties can be collected due wholly to the fact that it is so much easier to push the defending team to the breaking point. That was the situation that existed in the hand below, when East and West had a part-score of 40.

Mrs. Culbertson

East, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable; East-West part-score 40.



The bidding:

East	South	West	North
3 ◇ (1)	3 ♡ (2)	Pass (3)	4 ♡ (4)
Pass	Pass	Pass (5)

1—It must be admitted that East has extremely poor material based on honor strength to defend his part-score. He has, it is true, an eight-card suit with not over three losers even against the worst possible distribution, but outside of that his trick-taking hopes are based only on the club King. Of course, his partner has yet to speak and may have a very fine hand, but East feels that he can take no chances with his trickless monstrosity of permitting North and South to get together cheaply.

2—South is on the spot. He has of course the alternative of passing and thereby probably surrendering the first game on the rubber to his adversaries, but after much thought he decides to bid his four-card heart suit, weak though it is, with the thought in the back of his mind that he may big four clubs if doubled. The bid is dangerous, but South feels that the great bulk of the honor strength not in his own hand is in the hands either of his partner or of West.

3—West has strong hopes of defeating a game contract if South undertakes it. He has, of course, no Raise for his partner, and in view of the Opening three-diamond bid, three spades with his weak six-card suit appears dangerous in the extreme.

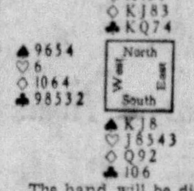
West opened a diamond in response to his partner's bid, which, of course, was won with the singleton Ace in Dummy. A small spade was then returned. South winning with the King. A small heart was led, and West went up with the Ace immediately. While he suspected that East might have held a singleton spade, he was quite sure that he now held no more trumps as South could scarcely have bid on less than four hearts to the Jack. Hoping to secure a ruff, he now led his singleton club. South went up with the Ace, and laid down the King of hearts. While it seemed reasonably certain that a finesse against the Queen would win, South could see his contract assured even though he conceded West an unnecessary trick. After leading the heart King and thus determining the trump situation, he led a club from Dummy. East won and West discarded his remaining diamond. East, of course, continued the diamond, but it was of no avail. If West trumped, Dummy would overtrump, and if West discarded South would win the diamond trick and lead a trump. West's only remaining trick was the trump Queen and it made no difference whether he took it now or later.

The semi-Pre-emptive bid had accomplished one purpose. It had put North and South into a dangerous contract. Five clubs, of course, can be made without difficulty, and is the logical contract to be undertaken. However, hampered by the unusual line of attack, South probably did as well with the situation as could be expected.

TOMORROW'S HAND

North, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

(Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your question to Josephine Culbertson, in care of the Sun-Telegraph.)

The Beauty Box

Are you nice to your ears? Should be. Pretty little shells, they like attention. Powder them carefully, touch lobes with rouge. A natural blush includes the ears. Which reminds us that somebody has said that blushing is the only trick a woman can't learn.

Unless dandruff is softened with oily applications, the shampoo will not dislodge it, especially if it is of an oily character that sticks like a friend and a brother.

Never disturb dandruff with the teeth of a comb, or dig with the finger nails. Wherever there is an abrasion, germs may set up a household, and infection may result.

Madge's Father Disappears

My father put his hand on my shoulder, as I asked him why he mustn't send me down to supervise the transportation of the bound Chinese from the woodland glade to the farm.

"I am arguing against myself, my dear," he said sadly. "I don't want to send you into danger, but I do not know what else to do."

"Danger!" I said scornfully. "What possible danger can there be, with men so firmly bound that they cannot move."

"Do you remember how a man so bound lunged at you with his manacled hands and almost landed a blow which might have killed you?" he asked.

I shuddered inwardly at the remembrance of that scene in the farm house kitchen, but outwardly I am sure I showed no concern.

"I am one of the people who learn by experience," I told him, "and I shall take particular care that neither I nor the boys shall get into a position where such an attack could be tried."

BOB ACTS AS GUIDE

"That is why I am letting you go," he said slowly, "because you have had experience with the deadliness of these devils, and the boys have not. But you must be on the alert every second, from the instant you leave here until you get back."

"I know that, father," I said simply, "and I shall not forget."

He stooped and kissed my forehead.

"God bless and keep you safe, my darling," he said. "Now I am not going to suggest anything to you. Map out your own campaign. There is only one thing I ask. Do not show yourself in the open glade. Have the boys carry the Chinese, one at a time, around the edge through the underbrush.

"I'll remember, I promised quailing a little at the prospect of the difficulties involved in carrying out such an injunction.

"Then you would better start, Bob, you're just come through that underbrush. Can you guide Mrs. Graham back through it?

"I can guide her through it," he said, "but I can't guarantee her immunity from brier scratches and possible poison ivy."

"I don't mind the briers, Bob," I said promptly, "and I'm practically immune from poison ivy, I fancy. At least I've never suffered from it, and I've been near it scores of times. So come along."

"Better grab my mitt, then," he said. "I at least can keep you from stumbling."

I clasped his hand thankfully, and a last look at my father showed him standing by the car with his face steadfastly turned toward the bend, around which lay possible discovery of our expedition by hostile or disturbingly inquiring minds.

On the other side of the car Otto stood evidently awaiting orders.

"Follow us Otto, please," I said, and the big chauffeur saluted as he turned into the path after us. He was so big a man that I fully expected his movements when we came to the underbrush would advertise our presence to anyone upon the highway. But somewhere, perhaps in his youth in his own country, he had been used to woodcraft, for he was surprisingly light-footed and noiseless when, after coming to Bill guarding the light car, we turned to the left and began crawling the little glade through the underbrush.

MR. SPENCER VANISHES

Despite all that Bob and Otto could do to shield me, I was pretty well scratched by briers when we finally arrived at the place where we had left the Chinese. One glance at their malevolent faces was enough for me. After that I kept my face averted as I planned their removal. I felt that I should have my pet admonition in women—an attack of nerves—if I saw those beady black eyes glaring impotently at me again.

I made short work of their removal. Keeping Hank to watch with me, I directed Ronald, Bob and Otto to carry one of the Chinese through the underbrush to the smaller car and fasten him securely to the blanket rack. They made short work of the journey, and when they returned for the second Chinese, I followed them back through the underbrush.

With both men bound securely in the car, Bill drove up the winding path to the place where we had left the big limousine. But my father was nowhere to be seen.

ARMSTRONG, CORIA LEAD IN PUBLINKS SEMI-FINALS

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

Negro Age Marvel Back. Golf at Bedford Springs. Ring Victory After Kayo.

Veteran golf observers who followed the great links duel between Arthur Armstrong and Albert (Scotty) Campbell at South Park yesterday got more out of the spectacle than the immediate thrill of watching the two youthful stars, both of whom were at the top of their game. Men like J. D. O'Neil, Pittsburgh representative of the U. S. G. A., and Al McBride, professional at South Park, looked back across the years to a similar scene at Oakmont when two other brilliant kids were battling over that championship course in quest of a national amateur title.

Scotty Campbell

In the Oakmont picture were two fine lads who had plenty of social prestige and considerable wealth behind them. At South Park, riches and social prestige had to make way for public links democracy, yet in the opinion of the men who saw the championship event at Oakmont 15 years ago, the skill and cleverness of Armstrong and Campbell matched the ability of Bobby Jones and Davy Herron, heroes of the 1919 tussle.

The similarity of the two scenes was carried further in that the ages of the players concerned were almost the same. Jones was 17 and Herron 22 when they clashed here; Armstrong, the gritty Hawaiian and champion golfer of the island passession, is only 17, while his defeated foe of yesterday, Campbell, holder of the Canadian and Northwest amateur titles, is just 20. But the big point which golf students of this locality would like to bring out is that the top-line competitors who have appeared in the public links tournament here this week are right on a par with the contestants in the annual national amateur event. In other words, they would back Armstrong or Campbell in yesterday's form against any national amateur tournament player in the land.

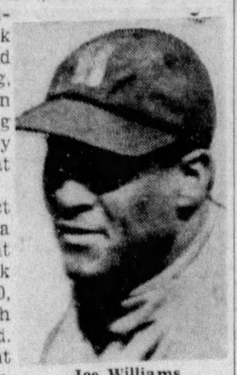
SMOKY JOE TO PITCH HERE AGAIN AT AGE OF 58

Baseball fans of this district will get another look at the age marvel among the country's pitchers when Smoky Joe Williams, famous Negro star, comes back to Forbes Field on Sunday to pitch part of the game for the Homestead Grays against the Fort Wayne Berghoffs. Williams is 58.

Smoky Joe pitched for the San Antonio Negro club until 1909. In a game against Rube Foster's Leland Giants in Atlanta for the Negro championship he was defeated, 2 to 1. In the winter of 1909-10 he traveled with the Leland Giants on a tour to the Pacific Coast. In 1911, Joe joined the Lincoln Giants and won the Negro title continuously until 1923. He pitched for Nat Strong's Brooklyn Royal Giants in 1924, joining the Homestead Grays in 1925 and remaining with Cum Posey's outfit until 1933. Instead of resting during the off season, he pitched for the Royal Poinciana club at Palm Beach, Fla., each winter from 1912 to 1930.

MANY REMARKABLE SLAB FEATS IN RECORD

Williams' record is dotted with remarkable pitching achievements. In an 11-inning game against the Bushwick club, of Brooklyn, in 1924, which he lost, 4 to 3, Joe struck out 27 batters. He beat George Chalmers, of the Phils, 1 to 0, at New York in 1915. With the tying run on third base and none out in the ninth inning, he struck out three straight batters on nine pitched balls, the last man being such a renowned hitter as Gavvy Cravath. They still talk about that game in Harlem.



Joe Williams

In 1928, Williams pitched a perfect game against Akron, not allowing a man to reach first base. In a night game at Kansas City in 1930, he struck out 27 men in 12 innings to win, 1 to 0, allowing only one hit, a pop fly which went over the first baseman's head. Joe also was a great hitter, and sent long drives out of parks in New York, Chicago and Columbus, while at Cycler Park in McKeesport he was the first man ever to hit a ball over the left-field fence. Wililams was a model of deportment. He never was put out of a game and never was known to get into an argument with either an opponent or a team mate. Fortunately for opponents, Smoky Joe always had fine control of his terrific speed. In all his career he hit only three batsmen.

BEDFORD SPRINGS NEXT GOLFING SCENE

Following the completion of the national public links tournament on the South Park course tomorrow, the next important golf number to claim attention will be the fifteenth annual professional tournament of the Bedford Springs Golf Club, opening Monday with 36 holes medal play.

The Bedford Springs pro championship is now held by Al Houghton, pro at the Kenwood Golf and Country Club, near Washington, whose excellent play in the P. G. A. tourney at Buffalo last week, until he lost his match with Denny Shute, threatens plenty of trouble for the Pittsburgh sharpshooters when they try to wrest his title from him. The Bedford Springs event annually attracts a list of entries rarely surpassed outside of national championships.

SAYS YAROSZ WON WHILE KNOCKED OUT

According to Scotty Monteith, veteran fistic figure, Teddy Yarosz holds the distinction of being the only boxer on record who ever won a fight while knocked out. Scotty says that in the recent Chicago bout with Tait Littman, of Milwaukee, Yarosz was actually knocked out by a clip on the chin in the tenth round without going down, and that he finished the round, received the decision and hustled off to the dressing room unconscious of what was going on. In the dressing room, Monteith relates, Teddy was yelling that he was dying. Scotty himself examined the Monaca man and found nothing wrong. Three different doctors who were summoned made the same report. Then Yarosz repeatedly asked when the fight would start, though Manager Ray Foutts explained that it was over and won and that there was nothing to worry about.

Teddy Yarosz

Monteith goes on to say that by that time he was convinced the blow in the tenth round had unsettled Yarosz's brain; that Teddy had been knocked out, but had such a great pair of legs and was in such good condition that he kept his feet and continued fighting by instinct. Visiting Yarosz in his hotel room at 2 a. m., Scotty says he found that the boxer was completely conscious, but imagined that he had been counted out in the ring and that his manager was keeping the news from him. It wasn't until Monteith showed him the morning paper headlines that Teddy was convinced. He read the story, grinned, and remarked, "Well, that's that." Monteith says he has seen this happen to beaten boxers has known them to come into the dressing room and be revived after a knockout and have no recollection of what happened in the ring. But, he adds, this was the first time he ever saw a man WIN when he was absolutely out.

Tense Gallery Sees Scotty Campbell Lose to Hawaiian Star

GREAT GAMBLE GIVES HAWAII STAR WIN

By JESS CARVER

For all the gallerites and experts and kibitzers at the National Public Links golf championship were pulling for and secretly (or otherwise) hoping that Arthur Armstrong, the personable and colorful Englishman from far off, even at tourist rates, Hawaii, would come though and attain the final round in the gruelling match play competition, it's an even wager that 90 per cent of the above were of the opinion that the bronzed Islander did not have the old intestinal fortitude to make the grade.

They knew he had the shots, but they were not so certain that he had the stuff to stick in there when the going became rocky.

PUTS OUT FAVORITE

Well, Hawaii Art just eliminated the tournament favorite yesterday afternoon at South Park in one of the most sensational, brilliant and well played matches that ever was staged. He won, 1 up, after coming from behind on no fewer than three occasions to square matters against as formidable an amateur as there is swinging a No. 6 iron today . . . Albert (Scotty) Campbell, of Seattle, the tournament medalist, who shot a par-epualling 144 to accomplish same.

Yesterday's thrilling match, witnessed by a gallery of at least 1,000, was won on No. 12 hole, to this department's way of thinking, and let it be said here and now that the only tangible gain that the Honolulu lad made on the hole was to square the match.

But—he took two big gambles on the hole, and won 'em both, and you can't tell me that the result did not affect Scotty.

Trailing, 1 down, Armstrong stepped up to the No. 12 tee, with Campbell already safe on the dogleg fairway with a pip of a drive. If Art is game enough to take the gamble, he can shoot across the angle and take a chance of beating Campbell's shot. If he is short, or slices, it will be too bad, just too, too bad.

SHOWS GREAT SPIRIT

Then and there was when the Hawaiian demonstrated his fortitude. He cracked it the tough way and made the point, putting his tee shot in the fairway, 50-odd yards from the pin.

Campbell, however, a fine golfer, probably a better man than is left in the tourney at this time, excluding Armstrong, wasn't through by the dickens of a sight. He made a game try and was on in two, and what is more to the point, he lays Art a half stymie.

'Its the second gamble of the hole for the Hawaiian, who, don't forget, is 1 down at the time. He can play it safe for a certain half, or he can make a try for a win. He steps up to his ball, and very neatly sinks a putt for a four, squaring the match and doing something to Campbell which even the calm and collected Seattle lad did not, at the time, realize.

SINKS LONG ONE

Armstrong lost the next hole, halved the fourteenth and fifteenth and stepped up to his ball in No. 16 some 63 yards from the pin, on the very fringe of the green, needing a three to win and a four to tie. Now 63 feet is a whale of a distance to sink a chip . . . in fact, when he took his rusty but trusty No. 6 iron from the bag, the gallery gasp . . . and the collective gasp of a 1,000 gallery is quite some gasp.

He studies the lie briefly, ad-

GORDON DENNY

Denny, Louisville star, was beaten in 20 holes by Joe Coria, of St. Paul, in the quarter-finals of the Publinks tourney, after Coria had put out Charley Ferrera, the defending champion, in the morning round of play yesterday. This is a Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture.

Personalities In Softball

William (Hocks) Jordan, who pitched the Commercial Garage team to its first victory in the second round of the playoff series in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's amateur softball tournament, has been hitting the ball in great style. His double in the first inning of the Commercial-American Fruit Growers game scored two teammates. He collected three hits in four times at bat. Jordan, who would rather play the outfield than pitch, was sent against the Fruit Growers at the last minute. Irving Brenner was scheduled to take the mound, but could not get back from camp in time for the contest. Hooks was graduated from Central High School.

W. Jordan

Bill Lavelle, manager of the Highview team, formerly known as the East Liberty Drugs, in Bracket III of the senior division of the Sun-Telegraph's softball tournament, boasts a fine array of stars. It was his star battery, Dan Auslander and Frank Rubinstein, that handed the Hunzeker Radiator and Al Anderson the defeat that ruined the Huns' chances of getting into the playoffs. Auslander won the contest, 2-1. Sam Baraff is the team's leading hitter. The Highview outfit won five games and lost only two in tourney play, bowing to the Campbell Shamrocks and the O'Tooles, of Hazelwood, who are in the playoffs.

TWO SOFTBALL PLAYOFF DUELS ON TODAY

By PHIL GRABOWSKI

Softball Tournament Secretary

Two games are listed today in the playoff series for the senior division teams in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament.

Manager Eddie Rice will lead his Fort Black Community Club against the charges of the Ardmore Gardens on the Peabody High School field. The Blacks lost a playoff game to the Commercials with the Bracket V title at stake. The Ardmores whipped Books of Donora to gain a place in the second round eliminations.

Elizabeth Produce, winner of the Bracket IV crown, will encounter the Adams Bottles softballers, who finished in second place in Bracket VI, on the Schenley High School diamond. The Produce team won seven straight games in its bracket, while Adams lost only one while winning five.

Fred Crum, former Schenley High School basketball star, and Frank Sanford, end on the Carnegie Tech football team last season, are the mainstays of the Community Club. Fred is the captain and regular shortstop and Sanford plays in the outfield. Both are good hitters and fielders.

Softball Slants

The E. J. Notz team holds an unusual record in softball. None of the players have struck out so far in Sun-Telegraph softball tournament games. The team is made up of hard hitters and classy fielders. The Notz won their first elimination game.

The S. A. O'Tooles, who have been playing with a 14-inch ball, did not encounter any difficulty when they won their first elimination game playing with a 12-inch ball. Tom McKenna may do all of the softball pitching for the O'Tooles.

Eddie Pollock, manager of the American Fruit Growers' team in Bracket I of the senior division, is a classy catcher. Although his team lost out in the eliminations it did not hurt his play behind the plate. His team won seven straight games in its bracket.

The first semi-final game in the junior division will be played Monday at Washington Park. The Pioneers, of Carnegie, meet the Calvary team, champions of Bracket I.

Vincent Del Greco, star shortfield of the Bracket V champion Commercial team, has showed improved form and is playing a great game. He has been hitting the ball very hard in the last three games.

O'Farrell Offered Job With Cubs

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—The Cubs have offered Bob O'Farrell, deposed manager of the Cincinnati Reds, a position as first relief catcher.

The veteran backstop, who was with Chicago from 1918 to mid-1925, said he would reply within a day or two.

HONOLULU LAD 5 UP AFTER 18 HOLES

By TOM BIRKS

SOUTH PARK, Aug. 3.—Arthur Armstrong, the Honolulu darling of the gallery, was leading Loraine Young, of San Antonio, Tex., 5 up, and Joe Coria, of St. Paul, was leading Dave Mitchell, of Indianapolis, 2 up, at the end of the 18-hole morning round in the 36-hole semi-finals of the national public links championship here today.

Armstrong, who thrilled the crowd yesterday by eliminating Scotty Campbell, of Seattle, the medalist, flashed in-and-out golf today in gaining his lead. He was out in 42 and was 1 up at the turn only because Young failed to display anything approaching the form he flashed to beat Carl Kauffmann, three times champion, and Bruce McCormick. Young also was out in 42 strokes, and did not take advantage of the wildness of the Honolulu boy. Young won the first and eighth holes, both with par golf. Armstrong winning the fourth, fifth and seventh with a par and two birdies.

YOUNG 'BLOWS UP'

Young blew up completely on the homeward journey, and Armstrong took full advantage of his opponent's misplays. The tenth was halved; Armstrong won the eleventh with a par 4; the twelfth was halved; Armstrong had a birdie 3 on the fourteenth for a win and parred the fifteenth and sixteenth for wins to become 5 up. The last two holes were halved when both players three-putted the seventeenth and played the last hole in par.

Despite the fact that it produced better golf, the Coria-Mitchell match attracted only a small gallery. The Honolulu lad apears to have captured the fancy of the fans, who applaud his every shot. Armstrong kept his followers on edge, for, as in the past, he was wild from the tee and forced to execute difficult recovery shots.

Starting out behind the Armstrong-Young match, Mitchell won the first hole with a par 5, Coria getting in trouble with his second. The third and fourth holes were parred, then the St. Paul boy evened up the match with a 4 on the fourth hole. Coria had a birdie 4 on the long fifth to take the lead. The next three holes were halved, and the St. Paul entry became 2 up at the turn when he sank a 30-foot putt on the ninth for a birdie 3.

MITCHELL TRAILS

Mitchell played perfect golf on the long eleventh to reduce Coria's lead and squared the match on the thirteenth with a 5, Coria getting into the traps on this par-4 hole to take a 6. Coria went into the lead on the fifteenth with a par 3, the Indianapolis player slicing his drive. Mitchell sank a long putt on the sixteenth to win with a par 4. Coria three-putting the green, and the match was square.

Mitchell's putter went haywire on the short seventeenth, Coria winning with a par 3. Both had good drives on the eighteenth hole, but Mitchell overran the cup and missed his putt coming back. Coria was short with his chip, but sank a 12-footer for a birdie 3 to start the afternoon round 2 up.

The medal scores for the first 18 holes found Armstrong with a 78; Young, an 83; Coria, a 75, and Mitchell, a 76.

The morning round was played in a gusty wind, under lowering clouds, and a storm broke over the course just as the morning

BUCCANEERS OPEN SERIES WITH CARDINALS IN ST. LOUIS

Believe It Or Not By Ripley

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: THE BEGINNING AND THE END—The British mobilized on August 3, 1914, and on the night of August 7 began to embark an Expeditionary Force to France. The trans-shipment is one of the greatest navigation feats in martial history and lasted 10 days. On August 23, the British troops for the first time came to grips with the German armies of Von Kluck and Bulow. This first battle took place at Mons, Belgium and lasted five days, marking the beginning of Great Britain's part in the World War. By a stroke of poetic justice, Britain's World War activities ended on the same spot. The British troops recaptured Mons on the morning of November 11, 1918, almost at the exact moment at which the Armistice was being signed.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 3.—The Pirates landed this morning in this tough shot for all big-league ball clubs. The Traynor entry is due to take on the Cardinals four times in three days, a double-header being slated for Sunday.

The series will get under way this afternoon with a single contest. Manager Traynor is in a quandary as a result of several sick and ailing pitchers, but Waite Hoyt, one of his willing workers, is available for duty and may draw the slab ticket against one of the Dean boys. Dizzy is due to twirl for the Redbirds.

The Pirates unleashed a furious drive against the Reds yesterday in Cincinnati as the two clubs staged the fourth and final game of the series. The Buccos were peeved over their sorry showing in two contests which they dropped, in any event they threw everything they had at the Rhinelanders and were able to cop the contest, 13 to 3.

Red Lucas outpitched three Cincinnati hurlers as he downed his former buddies for the fourth time this season. The sorrel-top hasn't been able to do much for the Pirates, but he has the number of the boys with whom he was associated over a long period.

The Pittsburghers had three innings in which they scored four runs. They hammered the big total over in the fourth and sixth and bagged another quartet of markers in the eighth to call it a day.

Frey, Kleinhans and Brennan were the victims of a 14-hit attack in the order named. Arky Vaughan came out of his slump as he smacked out two singles and a double. Chick Hafey, Red slugger, connected for his second homer in two days. The Reds scored a run off Lucas in the first and were then scoreless until the seventh when Red appeared to relax a bit as two more of the enemy went over. The Bucs went runless for three rounds, but when they did begin to hit they made up for lost time.

St. Clair Women Tie Westmoreland

Westmoreland and St. Clair played to a 3-3 deadlock at the Oakmont Country Club today in their match to determine which team shall play as a member of section 1 in the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania Team League next season.

Westmoreland finished last in section 1, and St. Clair won in section 2 in the league campaign recently closed. The match will be replayed in September. The summary of today's match:

St. Clair—Mrs. L. W. Gillette, 0; Mrs. R. K. McConnell, 0; Mrs. J. R. Murphy, 1 point; Mrs. Clark Smith, 0; Mrs. E. H. Schaffer, 1 point; Mrs. R. C. Kramer, 1 point.

Westmoreland—Mrs. Chester Lehman, 1 point; Mrs. Lois Hollander, 1 point; Mrs. C. Bunstein, 0; Mrs. Ronald Hulme, 1 point; Miss Peggy Pearlman, 0; Mrs. A. Lee Weil, 0.

QUAILLS WIN AGAIN

With Mike Konkoncze's homer featuring the Quaill Club members defeated the South Hills Postoffice team last evening, 4 to 3. Today the Quaills oppose West Liberty Eagles on Milan Field, East Brookline.

Champion Bows Out

JOE CORIA CHARLEY FERRARA

Ferrara, of San Francisco, twice champion, faded out of the National Public Links golf tournament at South Park yesterday when Joe Coria, of St. Paul, defeated him in the third round, 5 and 3. Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph picture shows him wishing his conqueror luck—and Joe went on to gain the semi-finals.

Sports Shorts

In a letter to Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, president of the Boston Braves, Rabbit Maranville today revealed that he had undergone a fourth operation on his knee at Rochester General Hospital, and that he was hopeful of returning to the second base post next season. Rabbit broke his leg during a spring training exhibition game at St. Petersburg, Fla., last spring.

William Woodward's Almeria today won the Chesterfield Cup feature of the closing card at Ascot, England. Three other American-owned horses, including A. C. Bostwick's Mate, were among the also rans.

Caddies at the Moose Country Club, near Johnstown, Pa., striking for a higher rate of pay and a 5:30 p. m. limit on starting times, yesterday chased Carl Schwab, club professional, and Edward Livingston, chairman of the house committee, from the first tee with a shower of stones.

PARKS LEADER IN CANDIAN OPEN GOLF

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—Sam Parks, Jr., of Pittsburgh, paced early 36-hole finishers in the Canadian open golf championship here today when he added a 71 to his 75 of yesterday to total 146. Parks' 71 represented one over par for the Lakeview course.

Straight Heat Win Marks Circuit Race

SALEM, N. H., Aug. 3.—(AP)—Laurel Hanover, a fleet son of the Laurel Hall and the pride of a Machias (Me.) stable, yesterday gave a consistent performance in the $1,574 3-year-olds' pacing stake that featured the Grand Circuit's second day program at Rockingham Park.

PIRATES SIGN TACKLE

The Pirates, Pittsburgh's entry in the National Football League, today announced the signing of Chris Kopcha, 220-pound tackle, who starred for the Pitt eleven last season. Kopcha, a native of Pittsburgh, was signed by Jimmy Conzelman, coach of All the Talent, after one of the club's scouts had seen him starring for the Pirates.

Damon Runyon

Anything this man Damon Runyon does nowadays belongs on the sports pages, the theatrical and movie pages, the literary pages and anywhere else people look for interesting personalities . . . Which is by way of saying he's in again . . . This time it's with his second book of short stories, published by Stokes today . . . It includes "Little Miss Marker," "The Lemon Drop Kid," "Three Wise Guys" and 10 other stories which first appeared in the magazines and caused the moving picture people to fight among themselves for the screen rights . . . The book is titled rather catchily, "Damon Runyon's Blue Plate Special," and contains a foreword by Walter Winchell . . . Runyon's first collection of short stories in book form was "Guys and Dolls." . . . It was good, but this one is better . . . A review of an advance copy has convinced this observer that the ace Hearst sports writer and reporter is gradually stepping ahead of the field of contemporary short fictionists and even now may be what is claimed for him by many critics—"the new O. Henry."

Scotty Campbell, the Seattle sensation of the Public Parks golf tournament here, plans to defend his Canadian amateur championship and compete for the United States amateur title this summer and is figuring on returning to Pittsburgh next year to play in our National Open at Oakmont . . . Dr. J. Staunton Saling, chairman of the committee which staged the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph-Oakmont Boat Club regatta recently, and Mrs. Saling, will leave this week-end for Chicago on the first stop of a vacation trip.

The talk around town is that the plan to build a bigger and better Motor Square Garden on the site of the present structure may be sidetracked again . . . The French Boxing Federation and International Boxing Union are protesting the action of the New York State Athletic Commission in refusing to recognize Marcel Thil as the real middleweight champion and ordering Vince Dundee to defend his title against our Ted Yarosz . . . The Europeans resent the tendency to ignore European champions and set up a monopoly on world titles in the United States . . . Local softball teams may be interested to know that the second annual night softball tournament will be held at Patterson Field, East Liverpool, O., beginning August 13 and continuing until a champion is decided . . . Teams desiring further information about the competition may obtain it by writing Bert Dawson, 908 Florence street, East Liverpool.

Walter Marm, local amateur welterweight boxer, is spending the summer in Los Angeles, where he is working out with the boxers of Jim Jeffries and George Blake . . . Marm, a railroader, will return to his job in the B. & O. shops in Hazelwood in the fall . . . Ben Bright, the swimming coach, is vacationing, as usual, at Wildwood, N. J. . . . Our own Herman Schmidt is at Atlantic City, and so is Julius Levin, of this department.

Wilbur Hess, of Houston, Tex., and Doc Barr, of Dallas, Tex., were the finalists in the North Carolina tennis tournament . . . Where do they get that North Carolina title stuff, with two Texans playing for it? . . . Harry Seymour, dean of local tennis men, says a weak backhand gets Frank Shields into all of that trouble in tough matches and that he can't help it . . . All of the stars know his weakness and play to it . . . Frank came close to entering Pitt several years ago, by the way.

Chuck Klein, the Cubs' slugging star, always carries a collection of dimes with him to give to beggars, believing that to do such good turns will mean a reward in the way of base-hits . . . Wait'll you see the way he gets touched the next time he comes to Pittsburgh now that the news is out.

Reis Hurls Well To Blank Tubers

A five-hit shutout pitching performance by Reis, star of the Monessen slab staff, gave Monessen a 2-0 win over McKeesport in the Penn State Association yesterday.

Jeannette also got some good pitching, Moore beating Charleroi, 3 to 1. Greensburg nosed out Washington, 3 to 2, as McLean kept the Generals' six hits scattered.

The Dormont-Mt. Oliver game in the City League, carded for tonight at Dormont, has been indefinitely postponed because of wet grounds.

Efforts are to be made to play two other City Loop frays scheduled tonight, in which Immaculate Heart will appear at Homewood and the Books opposing Parmelee.

The Books strengthened their hold on first place last evening by walloping Mt. Oliver at Olympia Park, 7 to 1. Bimmy Steele turned in a fine five-hit performance.

The Homestead Grays have added a number of games to their card. This evening they face Sewickley. Tomorrow they are at Martins Ferry, Sunday they take on the Ft. Wayne Berhoffs at Forbes Field in a benefit game, meet the same team at Edgar Thompson Field, Braddock, on Monday and on Tuesday at Akron.

Next Thursday finds the team at Dayton, Friday at Brilliant, O., Saturday, at Altoona in the afternoon and at Port Matilda in the evening and on Sunday they take on the House of David at Harrisburg.

Last evening they knocked off West Newton, 5 to 3.

DETROIT SLAB STAFF KEEPS BENGALS IN PENNANT CHASE

ROOKIE AUKER BIG AID TO LEADERS

Associated Press.

A glance at the major league mound records for the current season reveals one good reason why the Detroit Tigers are up on top of the American League standing despite the undoubted strength of their rivals, the Yankees. The reason is found in Elden Auker, a big, strong, young right-hander who came up from Beaumont last year.

The 23-year-old Kansan, who has been taking his place with Fred Marberry, Tommy Bridges and Schoolboy Rowe, recorded his ninth victory of the season against four defeats yesterday when he shut out the third-place Indians with four hits to gain a 3-to-0 triumph.

YANKEES WIN

This gave the Tigers' "Big Four" a total of 47 victories out of 62 scored by the team.

The Yankees gave Ruffing a chance to take it easy and still win his twelfth victory when they hammered Henry Johnson and two successors all over the lot to defeat the Red Sox, 12 to 4.

The close resemblance between the National League pitching situation and that in the American was brought out when Roy Parmelee, who has shown only flashes of the form which made him one of the Giants' big four last year, suffered his fourth defeat since he returned to the active list following an appendicitis operation. Parmelee and the rest of the Giants were no match at all for Ed Brandt, veteran Boston southpaw, and the Braves won, 8 to 0.

The second-place Cubs gained a full game on the Giants by catching the Cardinals when neither of the Deans nor Tex Carleton was ready to work and whipping them, 6 to 2.

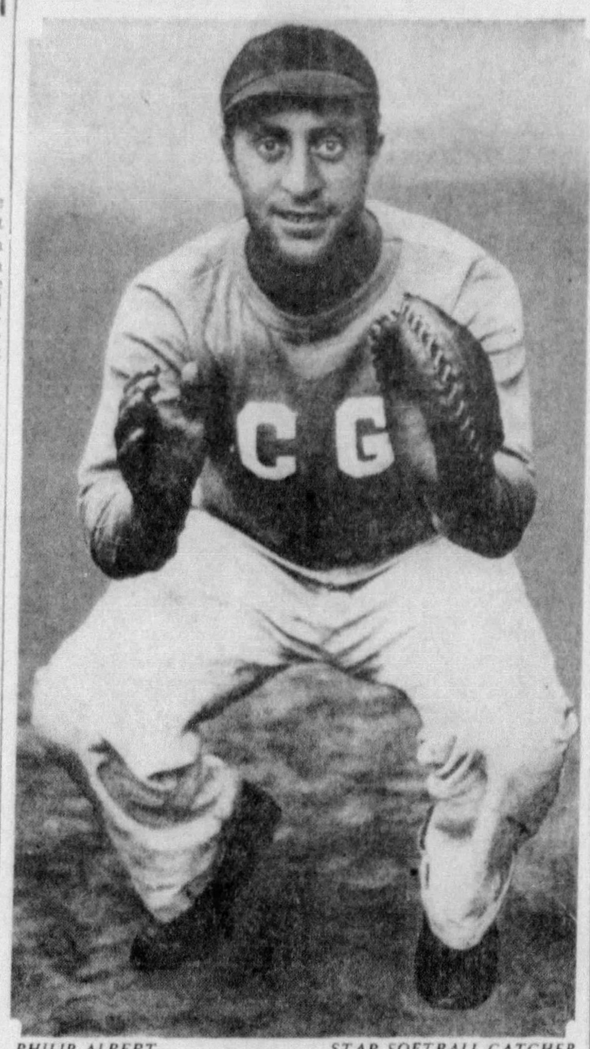
PHILLIES DEFEATED

The Dodgers and Phillies stirred up a lot of excitement in their struggle for sixth place when Brooklyn took an 8-to-7 decision on Al Lopez's ninth-inning homer.

At the finish of the game Otto Miller, Brooklyn coach, and Jimmy Wilson, Philadelphia manager, engaged in a fist fight. The reports said Wilson was on his back as the result of a sweeping left uppercut when other members of the two teams parted the combatants.

Both the pitchers and the fielders of the Cincinnati Reds were off form and Pittsburgh had an easy time taking a 13-to-3 decision. The St. Louis Browns came from behind to defeat the White Sox, 9 to 8.

His Team Winner



PHILIP ALBERT . . . . . STAR SOFTBALL CATCHER

Albert's team, the Commercial Garage outfit, is the champion of Section V of the senior division in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's amateur softball tournament and has advanced to the quarter-finals in the playoff series. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

Honus Says:

By HONUS WAGNER,
Former Star, Now Coach of Pirates.

To the Sports Editor:

The best news I read recently was where industry was going to be encouraged to hire handicapped persons—the lame, the halt and the blind. Even if the motive is a selfish one so that pensions won't be so great, it still is a good thing. Isn't it a shame that so many people just because they had the tough luck to have something like that happen to them can't find work. As if it was their fault! We are moving toward a better day no matter how things don't look like it. And we are moving swiftly.

GAMBLE WINS FOR HAWAIIAN

dressed the ball and . . . plop . . . in it dropped for a birdie. The brilliant shot squared the match again, and you can wager the the grocery money that it instilled into Armstrong the necessary fire to go on to victory on the next hole.

What matters it how he won on No. 17, when he took a three to Campbell's four, or how he held the Seattle star even on the home hole. He was in there when it counted.

The kid has the clay of which champions are moulded. True it is that Campbell has the better shots, the more polished style and maybe, is the better golfer. But he wasn't yesterday, and it for our dough, Arthur Armstrong, of Honolulu, will be the next public links champion of the United States.

At least, the kid will take a lot of beating.

Kemp to Coach At Bluefield College

Raymond Howard Kemp, former star Duquesne University tackle and graduate of 1931, has been appointed head football coach and director of athletics at Bluefield State Teachers' College, Bluefield, W. Va.

Kemp matriculated at Duquesne in 1927, Elmer Layden's first season on the Bluff. He played four years since the one year and freshman rules had not been adopted at that time.

DOUBLES NET TOURNEY PLAY POSTPONED

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Quarter-final round matches scheduled today in the first annual Edgeworth Club invitation men's doubles tennis tournament have been postponed because of last night's heavy rain and will be played tomorrow afternoon.

All quarter-finalists have been requested to report at the courts promptly at 2 o'clock, in order that both quarter-final and semi-final round matches may be complete by nightfall.

The most promising of the tussles will bring together Eddie Alcorn and Russ Unger, recent Fox Chapel victors, with the talented Sewickleyites, Paul Barber and King Moore.

FAVORITES WIN

Yesterday's frays terminated according to the dope, though several of the teams were pushed aplenty in second-round tussles. Barber and Moore caught a couple of youthful tartars in the Grant brothers, Eddie and Russell, of Emsworth. The Grants, a real darkhorse entry, first thumped Karl Wolfe and Don Monjot, 6-4, 6-4, then carried the Sewickley hopes to an extra canto, 6-4, 1-6, 6-0. The summary:

FIRST ROUND

Upper half—Ralph Bold and John Bald won from William J. Clardy and Howard Clark, 7-5, 2-6, 6-0, and default; Andrew Black and Paul G. Sullivan won from Frank S. McClintock and Frank White, by default.

Lower half—Charles B. Maits, Jr., and J. Don Mattern defeated Jack Schroeder and C. Rockstace, 6-0, 6-1; Howard J. Burgwin and Robert C. Schmertz defeated William Schroeder and Malcolm Hay, 8-0, 6-2; Edward Grant and Russell Grant defeated Don L. Monjot and Karl G. Wolfe, 6-4, 6-4.

SECOND ROUND

Upper half—Dr. David L. O'Loughlin and William L. O'Loughlin defeated Alfred D. McCabe, Jr., and Stephen Emery, 6-0, 7-5; E. A. Knoche and Neal O. Ramsey defeated Ralph Bald and John Bald, 7-5, 8-4; Andrew Black and Paul G. Sullivan defeated Frank A. Stoner and William Doolittle, 6-3, 6-2.

Lower half—Dr. John L. O'Loughlin and Sam Harbison defeated Charles B. Maits, Jr., and J. Don Mattern, 6-2, 6-1; Howard J. Burgwin and Robert C. Schmertz defeated Charles A. Woods, Jr., and Robert A. Applegate, 6-5, 6-4; Edgar Alcorn and W. Russell Unger won from Robert M. Rinehart and Robert Grier, 6-1, 7-5, and default; Paul Barber and King Moore defeated Edward Grant and Russell Grant, 6-1, 3-6, 6-0.

FAVORITES ADVANCE

The ranks of the favorites remained unbroken as play in the first annual Mt. Lebanon Park tennis tournament was inaugurated with the reeling off of 11 first-round matches in men's singles. C. Woodroff defeated R. Martin, and Paul Wick won over J. C. Manning in three-set thrillers. An effort is being made to prepare the courts for further play tonight. The results:

Upper bracket—Charles Selby defeated L. Krally, 6-3, 6-3; C. Woodroff defeated R. Martin, 7-5, 6-0; Paul Wick defeated J. C. Manning, 6-4, 2-6, 6-3; C. Anderson defeated F. F. Borchardt, 6-1, 6-4; William Fay defeated F. Mitchell, 6-1, 6-1; A. Heartman defeated D. McConnell, 6-2, 6-2; R. McGeagan defeated W. W. Woodruff, 6-2, 6-3; Jerry Maloney defeated Art Thielsman, 6-1, 6-2.

Lower bracket—H. Hatch defeated C. H. Rinehart, Jr., 6-3, 6-4; Gilbert Isserman defeated W. N. Krally, 6-4, 4-6, Paul Dalton defeated E. R. Heider, 6-1, 6-1.

5 FEARED DEAD IN LAKE ERIE WINDSTORM

CLEVELAND, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—A furious wind and rai nstorm which streaked out of Lake Erie last night at a 75-mile-an-hour clip, claimed probably five lives, and wreaked property damage in six figures.

Three Youngstown residents who left Ashtabula in a row boat to fish in the lake were missing today, and coast guardsmen who hunted them feared they were drowned.

The bodies of Paul Peth, 34, and his stepson, Daniel, 11, of Toledo, were washed ashore at Reno Beach, near Bono, O., this morning. They had been fishing at West Sister Island.

South Bass Island and its sole town, Put-in-Bay, were first and hardest hit by the storm, but no injuries or fatalities were reported there. Docks were wrecked and hurled into the lake. Mayor T. P. Alexander, of put-in-Bay, sent out a crew of 100 men to clear the debris today.

Put-in-Bay was cut off from all communication with the mainland for several hours. Lorain, Vermilion, Sandusky and Cedar Point last many light and telephone wires when poles were bowled over by the storm. Thousands of trees were laid low.

STORM DEATHS 9 IN MICHIGAN

DETROIT, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Eastern Michigan, fixing its casualty list at nine dead and scores injured, plunged today into the task of clearing debris-strewn roads and repairing storm damage unofficially estimated at $1,000,000.

Homes and stores in a dozen communities between Detroit and Flint must be reconstructed.

The storm struck Ida yesterday with a fury which blackened the sky for an hour, pelted the countryside with hail, disrupted wire and highway communication and beached the excursion steamer Tashmoo with its 250 passengers in the St. Clair River.

Roads were blocked for hours on both sides of Lake Erie as the gale toppled poles and trees. Even trains were stopped. Buildings erected in Toronto for the Canadian crops reunion were toppled.

Druggists Barred In Free Offers

The use of the word "free" in any druggist's advertisement will be considered a violation of the Retail Drug Code, and will be subject to any and all penalties imposed by the code, according to a ruling issued by the Drug Authority of Allegheny County.

SCENE PAINTED BY DYING ARTIST TO 'COME TO LIFE'

Kane Put Scot Picnic On Canvas Before He Was Stricken

Mr. Kane

Kane did the canvas some time ago, before a serious illness stilled his talented brush. He dedicated it to tomorrow's celebration, painting into the scene the figures of Jean Wood, 8, of 1868 Montier street, Wilkinsburg, and George Keillor, 62, of Hunter street, Wilkinsburg.

The two will take part in the Scottish dance competitions at the picnic, little Miss Wood having returned from Dundee, Scotland, to participate in the entertainment program.

Other events scheduled for the day include a bagpipe contest, a soccer football game, a pillow fight, a tug of war and a variety of races.

PLANE PERILED IN GALE

Eddie Dryer said he ran into the disturbance soon after leaving Buffalo for Cleveland with two passengers—A. W. Buckley, of the Truscon Steel Company, Youngstown, and G. E. Clodselter, of Chicago.

Dryer said the storm blew him miles off his course, lifted his plane from 4,000 to 14,000 feet, then smacked it toward the earth again. The controls were of no use, until the pilot sighted Brookville airport. He leveled off, and brought the craft to a safe landing.

TOWN ISOLATED AS BRIDGES GO

BRIDGETON, N. J., Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Bridgeton's West Side was virtually isolated from the town proper today when three bridges linking the districts yielded to the raging waters of the Chohansey River.

Between 6,000 and 8,000 residents were cut off from the business district by thec ollapse of the third span at Broad street. For several hours it had borne the entire burden of transportation. Vehicular traffic was stopped first and finally pedestrians were halted a short time before the span gave way to ther iver swollen by the rainfall estimated at more than seven inches.

Boats of every description were pressed into service. Travel by automobile between the two sections involved a 15-mile detour.

Leaves $500 for Dog, Nothing to Relatives

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Seven relatives seek to break the will of the late Mrs. Anna G. Bell, who omitted them from her bequests, but left $500 for the care of her dog.

Attacking the will in Surrogates' Court yesterday, they charged that Mrs. Bell was mentally unsound. The contesting relatives include five brothers and sisters and two nephews. The estate was valued at "more than $10,000."

Two Children 'Forget' How To Walk

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—(AP.)—Two Chicago children, victims of a rare nervous disorder which has robbed them of muscular co-ordination, are learning how to walk.

From birth, the two, Marian Marchese, 12, and her brother, Samuel, 10, have lacked control over their arms and legs, and their speech, too, has been affected.

STORM HALTS 2 WEDDINGS

That was the sign that went up in Athletic Park here last night after a huge crowd of would-be spectators at a public double wedding was drenched to the skin in a "bridal shower" that was as unwelcome as it was unexpected.

Miss Nancy Grace Barnes and Ammon G. Smith, both of Meadville, and Odore Bequette and Miss Dorotha Cosgrove, members of an exposition showing here this week, were ready to take the marriage vows in an outdoor ceremony at the carnival grounds when the heavens opened in a virtual cloudburst.

To add to the confusion as the throng scattered for shelter, all lights failed and those attending were forced to grope for cover in darkness.

QUAKES BRING THIEF ALARMS

Last night, however, five burglar alarms in close succession stirred the town's constabulary into activity. Twenty panicky citizens told the two officers that a prowling marauder appeared everywhere at once, shaking doors, rattling windows, even trying to enter houses through rooftops.

Then someone recalled that there had been minor earth shocks throughout the day. Probably there had been another. Everyone felt better—everyone except the man who had told how he routed the malefactor with a pistol.

Fired 3 'For Good Of Service'—M'Nair

Mayor McNair wrote Council that he had discharged James Bailey, O. B. Hannon and John Murphy as city assessors some two months ago "for the good of the service."

Council had withheld confirmation of two successors, Oscar C. Stoehr and Charles L. Briton, when Hannon and Murphy complained that no explanation had been made of their dismissal.

PRETTY BABY CONTEST HERE AUGUST 14

Olympia Park Scene Of Event Sponsored By Sun-Telegraph

The prettiest babies of the district—

Who are they?

It's to be held August 14 at Olympia Park, near McKeesport, sponsored by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The competition may be tough, but it won't be limited to just one prize. There will be more than one, so that plenty of pretty babies will have a chance.

GROUPED BY AGE

For instance, they will be grouped by ages, in three classes, and with separate competitions for boy and girl babies.

Class I will be for the prettiest baby boy and the prettiest baby girl between two and three years of age.

Class II will be for the prettiest baby boy and girl between three and four years of age.

Class III will be for babies—boys and girls—between the ages of four and five.

That's hard on the babies who are six and can't compete—but there are thousands of babies who are five and under, so Olympia Park should be crowded with baby beauties.

But there will be still another class—and this will be the most interesting of all—twins.

TWINS TO COMPETE

Eight possibilities of winning, each carrying with it a special prize given to the baby by this newspaper, to say nothing of the blue, red and white ribbons to be awarded to first, second and third winners in each separate contest.

The big "pretty baby" party will be held all day and evening at Olympia Park and there will be plenty of special strips of amusement tickets.

But the first step is to put your baby in his high-chair and give it the once-over, and then enter him or her on the accompanying entry blank.

Entry Blank for 'Pretty Baby' Contest

Olympia Park, Tuesday, August 14

PLEASE ENTER MY BABY IN THIS CONTEST.

Parent's Name.....

Street Number.....

Baby's Name.....

Age.....Boy or Girl.....

We'll gladly make arrangements so you can pay for any purchase in small sums to suit your income and convenience.

Universal Service.

Not within the memory of the present generation of business leaders has commercial credit been offered so cheaply.

Mr. Rukeyser

One leading industrial corporation has been importuned by money brokers to take loans for six months or less at an annual interest rate of one per cent.

But, in spite of the reported eagerness of the banks to lend, they are unquestionably applying more rigorous tests of security than was their custom before the depression.

The revaluation of security prices in part represents an adjustment to the new status of regulated markets, in which manipulation, which was a form of merchandising, was frowned upon.

One important insider, who regards his company very much as though it was his personal property, told me that he is not eager to see his shares marked up in price. He explained that he does not intend to sell out, and is primarily interested in the continuity of dividends. He pointed out that an inflated market price for his shares would merely mean that on his death his heirs would have to pay a higher inheritance tax.

Edward J. Cornish, chairman of the National Lead Company, told me that he is adverse to price-fixing under the NRA.

He thinks that some NRA associations tend to create monopoly conditions.

He points out that smaller competitors in some industries have only been able to live through price cutting. Without price cutting, he feels, all the available business would go to the leader, with superior good will and reputation.

If that happened, Cornish feels that the beneficiary monopolist would be prosecuted under the Sherman Act, after the temporary exemption under the NRA might be removed.

Hard-headed business men of the old school are perplexed by the current situation which is buoyed up so much by government spending. They feel that government money is being substituted for the credit of commerce, which depends on confidence.

The big job of the administration is to make spending a net increment to total economic activity, rather than a mere substitute for private spending and investment. To do that, Washington must hearten business leaders, and effect their more active co-operation.

Business would be enormously cheered by an announcement that the period of experimentation is concluded, and that no new burdens, in the form of taxes or otherwise, are contemplated until the national income returns to the pre-depression level. Such an announcement would start a psychological reflation of immense importance, and might well tend to put unemployment funds and idle men to work.

STOCK MARKET PRICE TREND INDEFINITE

Stocks backed and filled hesitantly. The pace was about as slow as in the previous creeping session. A few noticeably soft spots developed, but various groups also displayed a counteracting steady to firm tone. News of a stimulating nature was still lacking and public apathy seemed to be more pronounced than ever.

Grains were narrow during the greater part of the day, wheat and corn holding to a small fractional range. The major cereals rallied moderately later on a medium turnover. Cotton was inclined to yield under realizing pressure. Silver and rubber were quiet. Bonds were rather listless and slightly mixed. Foreign exchanges gave no indication of any especial perturbation over the European situation.

The flurry in the aviation group reflected further hopes that the Army demand for fighting planes would whip up more business for the manufacturers. The 40-weeks' earnings reports of Loew's drew some traders to this issue. The metals generally failed to show much enthusiasm for another advance of ⅛ of a cent an ounce in bar silver to 46¾ cents, equaling its year's high mark.

With the President back in the United States, and expectations general that he will say or do "something" that will give new life to the presently stagnant securities markets, brokers reported that many holders of stocks were reluctant to sell. Some analysts, however, expressed the belief that only a definite turn "to the right or left" by the administration will result in any activity of importance.

While company reports continued to stress the fact that higher operating costs were substantially cutting down net earnings, it was felt by some trade observers that this lag will sooner or later be overcome by greater economies. It was pointed out that actual business volumes, in a number of instances, have been highly satisfactory.

PLANS FREIGHT CAR POOLING

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—Despite the decline in railroad traffic and the consequent need for operating economies, the crosshaul movement of empty freight cars, which has been a disturbing subject for more than 30 years, continues unchecked, and Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, intends to do something about it.

This was disclosed today when he sent the regional co-ordinating committees an exhaustive report relating to the crosshaul movement of empty cars for their guidance and for recommendations to cure the situation. Eastman said:

"As illustrative of the importance of this item of railroad operation, the result of the change in relationship between revenue net ton-miles and empty car-miles from 1920 to 1932 was equivalent to 2,600,000,000 empty car-miles in the latter years.

"This enormous empty mileage is due to the unnecessary and avoidable crosshaul movement of empty cars."

WHEAT VALUES TAKE RISE

CHICAGO, Aug. 3.—Influenced by upturns of wheat quotations at Liverpool, grain values here averaged higher early today. Action at Liverpool was attributed to apprehension over the changing world wheat crop situation, particularly in North America.

Opening at ⅜ off to ¼ cent up, September new, $1.02@1.03, Chicago wheat afterward showed all around gains. Corn started at ⅛ cent decline to ¼ cent advance, September, 70⅝@71 cents, and then made a general upturn.

The easterly and northerly line shall be on the present westerly line of Brookline boulevard at a point distant south 29 degrees 44 minutes west 43.97 feet along the present westerly line of Brookline boulevard from the easterly line of the right of way of the West Liberty and Suburban Street Railway; thence shall end north 74 degrees 07 minutes 15 seconds west 20 feet to the easterly line of the right of way of the West Liberty and Suburban Street Railway; thence along the easterly line of the said right of way south 29 degrees 01 minute 30 seconds west 229.47 feet to a point of curve; thence continuing along the easterly line of the said right of way, by the arc of a circle deflecting to the left with a radius of 1027.11 feet and a central angle of 5 degrees 32 minutes for an arc distance of 99.16 feet to a point of tangent; thence by the tangent, continuing along the easterly line of the said right of way, south 23 degrees 29 minutes 30 seconds west 100.41 feet to a point of curve, thence southwardly by the arc of a circle deflecting to the left with a radius of 20 feet and a central angle of 20 degrees 30 minutes 10 seconds for an arc distance of 135.98 feet to a point of compound curve; thence southwardly by the arc of a circle deflecting to the left with a radius of 159 feet and a central angle of 54 degrees 56 minutes 50 seconds for an arc distance of 96.98 feet to a point, compound curve; thence southwardly eastwardly by the arc of a circle deflecting to the left with a radius of 20 feet and a central angle of 90 degrees for an arc distance of 30.38 feet a point of tangent on the northerly line of Kenilworth street; said point of tangent being distant south 58 degrees 02 minutes 30 seconds west 164.66 feet along northerly line of Kenilworth street from the westerly line of Jillson avenue; thence by a straight line to the southerly line of Kenilworth street at a point of curve distant south 58 degrees 02 minutes 30 seconds west 281.02 feet along the southerly line of Kenilworth street from the westerly line of Jillson avenue; thence northeastwardly by the arc of a circle deflecting to the right with a radius of 20 feet, a central angle of 71 degrees 25 minutes 10 seconds, and a chord bearing south 86 degrees 14 minutes 53 seconds east, for an arc distance of 24.93 feet to a point of reverse curve; thence southeastwardly by the arc of a circle deflecting to the left with a radius of 229 feet and a central angle of 39 degrees 19 minutes 10 seconds for an arc distance of 157.15 feet to a point of tangent; thence the tangent south 89 degrees 51 minutes 30 seconds east 177.17 feet to a point of curve; thence eastwardly by the arc of a circle deflecting to the left with a radius of 1200 feet and a central angle of 2 degrees 03 minutes 30 seconds for an arc distance of 43.11 feet to the easterly line of Jillson avenue; thence along the easterly line of Jillson avenue south 31 degrees 57 minutes 30 seconds east 9.49 feet to the northerly line of Shawnan street; thence along the northerly line of Shawnan street north 58 degrees 02 minutes 30 seconds east 16.80 feet to a point; thence eastwardly by the arc of a circle deflecting to the left with a radius of 1200 feet, a central angle of 19 degrees 11 minutes 10 seconds and a chord bearing north 48 degrees 34 minutes 05 seconds east for an arc distance of 401.83 feet to a point tangent; thence by the tangent north 38 degrees 58 minutes 30 seconds east 82.23 feet to a point of curve; thence, northwardly, eastwardly and southwardly by the arc of a circle deflecting to the right to a radius of 20 feet and a central angle of 141 degrees 32 minutes for an arc distance of 49.40 feet to a point of tangent on the westerly line of Pioneer ave., said point of tangent being distant south 29 degrees 30 minutes 30 seconds west 343.43 feet to a point of curve; Cast Into Eden

By HENRY C. ROWLAND

CHAPTER XIII

She gave a shiver. "What's to stop them from coming into the house? I shan't dare go out. Gorillas carry off women.

"Only in fake movies."

"Well, she said cryptically, "it's always an alibi. But this Paradise is still farther from that thing."

He tried to reassure her. But the memory of the nocturnal visitant made him none too sure himself . . .

Jerome had read in descriptions of African expeditions that beating of the chest was ominous . . . a preliminary to attack. He hoped it would be different in a gorilla that had been reared in semi-captivity and subject to discipline. He said as much to Linda.

"The trouble is we're not his master," she objected. "That big brute may think we've made way with him."

It was not a pleasant situation. Linda would be afraid to leave the premises and she would not let Jerome leave her. The nights would be still more filled with terror for her. The father of the tribe was evidently not satisfied with the new Adam and Eve as caretakers for their Garden of Eden.

Linda said dismally, "If I so much as take a nap here on the veranda one of the bad boys of the family is apt to slip up and yank off what little clothes I have left. Not that it would matter much."

Jerome was thinking hard. He said "you stand well with mother and the two younger children. The chances are that papa and the older boys if any, will hear about the handout and come round to cadge a little sugar."

"I'd say they'd been trained to leave the premises alone. They might not be able to resist tools and things though."

TAUGHT TO BEHAVE

Linda nodded. "There was something about the way mother slapped her older little boy and then cleared out. As if she really had no business here and knew it. I'll bet that nobody has ever been as glad to see this proprietor as I'll be when and if he comes back."

"Don't worry, Linda. He's probably taught these pets of his to behave. He may be working on some theory to develop their intelligence. Stealing our clothes looks like that. And wearing them, still more so."

They got their breakfast and the day wore on. But now they found themselves confined closely to the premises with the feeling that these would be sanctuary, at least from hostile violence. No place, however, beautiful, to which one may be limited can long preserve its attractiveness. There was not enough to do. Linda was not interested in the library selection. She was reassured when Jerome found some descriptive matter about gorillas and read it to her. These great apes had been maligned by African explorers and hunters. Later reports on their character were far more encouraging. Baboons were the only real bad actors of the simian family.

Linda was taking her siesta with Jerome on guard reading when his prophesy about the elder males was fulfilled. He had not heard a sound. Even the big macaw that did not seem to care for their society, but came and went as if feeling obliged to keep an eye on them occasionally, had flown off with disparaging cries.

The first that Jerome was aware of any visitor was the strange musky smell that he had got through the jalousies the night before. It was not the fetid odor of the monkey-house of a zoo but more like that of some sickish sweetly noxious plant. Yet one knew instantly that its origin was not vegetable but animal.

CARNERA OF JUNGLE

Jerome could feel his hair crisping a little at the nape of his neck. Standing nearly erect and almost within reach of him stood an enormous Equatorial African gorilla. The huge brute must have been a full six feet in height when drawn up straight, and its dimensions of chest and limbs and abdomen were, from the human scale, disproportionately colossal for this stature. A Primo Carnera of the jungle indeed!

Yet after the initial shock Jerome was not frightened. There is no face more expressive than that of the ape family because the facial muscles are so contractile and responsive to emotion. His first glance at the features of this great simian told Jerome that it had come in peace and friendliness and curiosity. Its brown mottled, close-set eyes rolled at him quizzically and he thought a little pleadingly. A constant tremor played through the long upper lip and it came to a droll point as Jerome watched motionless. Then it clicked its tongue softly, running it afterward over the fearful half-bared fangs.

Jerome was afraid that Linda might waken and be terrified into a convulsion. She was sleeping lightly with her face turned to the wall of the house. He said softly . . . "Linda . . ."

"Don't move. Don't look round, and above all don't scream."

"What?"

"Papa Goril has come to make a call. He looks jolly and good-natured. He was probably trying to take a rise out of us last night. Don't shriek or anything like that."

SHAKES HANDS

She lay perfectly still. The huge beast appeared to like the sound of Jerome's pleasant modulated voice. It grinned, then reached out a hand compared to which Jerome's was that of a little girl to that of an old-time bosun's mate. Jerome held his breath and took the Primo Carneran paw by two fingers that were smooth and cold, and gave them a little shake. "How are you, old chap?" he said. "Glad to make your acquaintance."

The gorilla chuckled and imitated the shake, more forcibly. Jerome let go. The big beast did not try to hold him.

He heard the wicker squeak as she turned, and then a deep-drawn gasp. The gorilla's eyes rolled at her, but not evily. They showed a lively curiosity. She said steadily enough: "My most awful nightmare never had anything on that . . ."

"Heaven . . . what shall I get him?"

"Go out slowly to the kitchen and mix some water and sugar in one of the empty quart bottles. Bring a little cut sugar, too. I'll try to keep him entertained."

Jerome started to sing in an agreeable lilting voice: "The rhyme of the Nancy Bell," an epic of which he had always been fond. The gorilla listened, scarcely noticing Linda as she tottered round to the kitchen on knees that were strong but now smittten with a near paralysis. When she returned with the bottle of syrup, Jerome was monotonously reciting: "So I never sings and I never shouts and I never romp and play, but I sits and croak my only joke and that which is to say . . ." (He was a bit inaccurate, she thought.)

LIKES POEM

Papa Gorilla had sunk down on bent knees with the knuckles of one hand resting on the rim of the porch. The poem appeared to affect him in its deeper tragedy. He blinked as if to suppress the tears. Then he suspended a gentle scratching of his vast hairy chest to reach out and stroke Jerome's cheek with his finger tips. Linda fought back a scream.

"Here's his tipple."

Jerome took it from her hand. "Hope he isn't disappointed that it's less than one-tenth of one per cent. But nobody would be fool enough to give likker to a guy like this."

The gorilla reached for the bottle. Linda put it in his hand, feeling faint. The great breadth of upper lip pointed again as the mouth of the bottle was inserted under it. The gorilla tilted back its massive head. There came steady gurgles both of syrup and of ecstasy as the fluid flowed steadily down. Linda had shaken up a little extract of vanilla with it. The ape's eye half closed in gustatory content.

"Does Papa like it?" Jerome asked. "I'll say he does. The trouble is we're apt to have him cadging all the time."

Synopsis

Jerome Crain, young naval architect, and a beautiful society girl, named Linda, land on a strange island in the Caribbean after having fled from a quarantined yacht. Their skiff is mysteriously set adrift and their clothes stolen, yet there is no other sign of a living human at first. Intermittently, however, blood-curdling cries come from the jungle. The mystery deepens with the finding of a well-kept though deserted plantation. They take refuge in a small house there. That night, Linda's slip is torn off her by some unseen creature, and again the eerie scream is heard. Linda, frightened, insists that Jerome stay near her. The mystery of the night prowlers and stolen clothing clears with the appearance of a mother gorilla and her cub. Linda feeds them sugar and they are friendly, but she is terrified.

Now Go On

Junior Patrol Mail Box

A new contest begins today, fellows, and we hope that more of our members than ever will try out for this one!

Tell your friends. Captains, get your patrol together and start every one of your members to writing a letter.

We have been paying the prizes regular—$2.50, first; $1.50, second, and $1, third. You have just as good a chance to win as any other boy and girl. Better get busy now. And you can write as many letters as you want. Read the comic strip just below for the new subject. Last week's winners will probably be announced tomorrow.

Try to keep your letters less than 100 words long. And send them all to the Junior Patrol Contest, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. Only Junior Patrol members can compete, so if you don't belong now send a signed up pledge right away—or a copy of it.

Lots of things would look better if they had a little paint on them. And there are always things to fix around a home. Are you handy with tools, fellows? Bet your mothers would all like it a lot if you could tack that broken screen together, and make the catch work again on that door.

And another good idea for Junior Patrol members to help their fathers and mothers is cleaning the family car. You like to ride in it. Don't you think it would be kind of nice for you to do your part in keeping it clean and shiny.

It's not hard to dust out the inside. And a little water and a soft rag will take the dust off the outside. How about trying it this week?

JUNIOR PATROL PLEDGE

I promise to help children less fortunate than I am.
I promise to do my best to make my parents proud of me.
I promise to watch carefully when crossing streets and to aid other children in keeping out of danger.

Date of Birth.....Address.....

Address this pledge to the JUNIOR PATROL, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa. Upon its receipt you will be registered as a member of the JUNIOR PATROL and will be forwarded a membership card and an official emblem.

Office Flirt -:- Daily Short Short-Story

By OTIS ADELBERT KLINE

Betty Brandon, the new stenographer, was easily the best-looking girl in the offices of Trigg & Co. And had she not been aware of it herself she would soon have been made so by the male members of the office force.

Naturally Betty became very unpopular with the feminine employes the very first day. But this did not bother her in the least. For were not all of the men her slaves? That is, all but the boss himself. He had to look stern and to keep himself aloof in his large private office.

Mortimer Trigg, president of Trigg & Co., was fat and 40, with graying hair and jowls that were beginning to sag.

"He's an old roue," Betty told herself. "Has to put on a front around the help. But he'll fall one of these days, and when he does—oh, baby! Little Betty will have herself a lot of nice clothes."

Betty's last boss, the advertising manager of a large concern, had lost his job and most of his ready cash on account of her. Not that she had ever gone out with him. He was a married man, and, anyway, there was Jimmy, her steady boy friend. But she had trimmed him neatly, nevertheless — presents, loans that were never repaid and what not. And he loved her madly.

Some time had elapsed between that job and this one and the money had been spent—the clothes much worn. Jimmy never worked and seldom had any money. She didn't love him. She loved only Betty. But she liked to have him hanging around.

But for three days Betty's hardboiled boss didn't even appear to know that she existed. On the fourth, however, she caught him glancing at her surreptitiously several times through the doorway of his private office.

Artfully, she displayed a shapely expanse of silk-stockinged limb and turned her head so that he might not miss the charm of her perfect profile.

"The big boob is hooked already," Betty told herself. And at noon, on the strength of those glances from the boss, she overstayed her lunch hour 20 minutes to look at the exclusive and expensive frocks in the Michigan avenue windows.

Betty answered her humbly enough, with an excuse about her wrist watch stopping. But to herself she said: "Dried-up old maid! She couldn't get a man to fall for her in a million years!"

As she took her seat at her typewriter she caught the boss looking at her again. And in his eyes was a far-away, dreamy expression which added much to her self-assurance.

The following morning Miss Sneed came over to Betty's desk and reproved her for the numerous errors she had made in billing.

"I'll try to do better," Betty promised, then added: "But why have you put me on billing? Any common typist can do that. I'm a stenographer and entitled to something better."

* * *

"We put every new girl on billing or form letters at first," replied Miss Sneed, "so she may familiarize herself with the office routine and the technical terms of the trade. If you want to take dictation, first show us that you can do the work of a typist with reasonable efficiency."

Miss Sneed strode away to her own work, and Betty resumed her billing, angry resentment burning in her breast.

"I'll soon have the boss eating out of my hand," she promised herself, "and when I do that old killjoy will be looking for another job."

Again during the morning she caught the boss looking at her several times, and once he smiled. She returned the smile with her best "come and get me" expression and resumed her typing.

After lunch she again went to Michigan avenue, and this time priced innumerable frocks which suited her fancy.

This time she walked into the office a half-hour late. Sneed glared at her venomously, but said nothing.

As she took her seat the boss again smiled at her. A few minutes later her buzzer sounded. It was a summons from the president.

"Won't you sit down, Miss Brandon?"

Artfully she returned his smile and sank into the seat. A feeling of exultation came over her. Evidently the boss had promoted her over the spiteful head of Miss Sneed.

"Take a letter, please," he instructed.

August 3, 1934.

Ever Ready Employment Agency, Chicago — Gentlemen: We are sorry to report that Miss Betty Brandon is shiftless, inaccurate, unpunctual and inattentive. We are letting her go today. If you cannot send us an efficient stenographer this time don't send any, or we will be forced hereafter to look elsewhere for our office help. Respectfully,

MORTIMER TRIGG.

Tomorrow: "Feet," by Palmer Griffith, tells of a war veteran who was destitute and went out selling dishes. He met a youngster who touched his heart and brought memories of other days. And to still his conscience he quit his job.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW?

By S. H. Connolly

Do you know:

1. Where did the phrase "to show the white feather" originate?
2. What is the "blowing" of a whale?
3. What are anchovies?
4. What do meteorites consist of?
5. What is the office of bursar in a university?
6. Where was the first museum?
7. What does the word "ceramic" pertain to?
8. When was Brooklyn Bridge opened?
9. What does June 14 celebrate?
10. In the canonization process of the Catholic Church, what is the "Devil's Advocate?"

Answers to today's test:

1. A phrase from the cockpit: no gamecock has a white feather; so it means to show cowardice. 2. Release of moisture-laden breath which on striking the colder air condenses. 3. Small herringlike fishes. 4. Mass of igneous stone or iron. 5. Treasurer. 6. At Alexandria, Egypt, about 250 B. C., founded by Ptolemy the First. 7. Pottery. 8. May 24, 1883. 9. Anniversary of the day on which the Continental Congress formally adopted the Stars and Stripes. 10. The person who points out the defects in the evidence.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

N. Y. Institute of Family Relations report says marital problems are complicated by the fact that many wives "never can make up their minds how they want to be treated."

Probably what it all boils down to is that there just aren't enough ways to treat wives.

Will yearn for cooing that is soft and gentle;
But has a yen, while getting treatment tender,

Dear, Thoughtful Aunt Bella:

If it is true that all criminals are of sub-normal intelligence and morons at heart, how are we ever going to solve the crime problem without changing human nature?

Perplexed.

Ans.—The only out Auntie B. sees is for our police departments to get busy and arrange for a few more cases of arrested development.

WELL, I SWAN!

O! Testy tenors and solo sopranos
Who murder sleep and grand pianos—
If you but knew—but knew your bananers
You'd envy the swan her considerate manners.
While you sing, while you play
While you try and keep trying
Reflect that this bird
Only sings when it's dying.

MEN OF ACTION

Here we have Marcus G. Silverstein, quick thinking motion picture producer, who has stepped forward with a plan that bids fair to untangle the tangle between an industry of which he is proud to be a member and the Legion of Decency. Silverstein says he'll produce clean pictures and plenty of them. All he ask of the Legion members in return is that they pledge themselves to go see one of his clean pictures every night—and take six friends.

There seems to be too much municipal agitation about what the men wear on the Atlantic beaches. Who looks at 'em anyway?

Riddle me that and we will proceed with the subject. It seems that the doctors have discovered a sun tan is very healthy if you don't get it all on your nose.

Well, the writer is something like Jimmy Durante. He has a nose that acts as a sunshade for the rest of his body.

In the early days we resembled Jimmy very much. Once, when we were the guest of honor at a dinner, Jimmy subbed for us on the dais until we got there. He fooled everybody, especially when he grabbed his soup plate by the crown fenders and poured it into his gullet.

When the sun gets on that beezer it turns it into a self-peeling artichoke. It gets so hot you could weld a broken crank shaft with it. That's why we refuse to get drawn into that controversy about tops or no tops.

No tops means walking around the sands without your shirt. You wear the top down like a convertible coupe. It seems to us that Valentino made his first sensational smash dressed like that in a moving picture. They have been swimming sans tops for years along the Riviera and the Channel ports.

Now, The Bug ain't a beautiful sight in swimming but if sunburn is healthy, he is entitled to his pro rata of the blisters.

At this time of the year the sun contains the violet ray which has astringent medicinal values and will clear up most any ill except balancing your books. And don't forget Johnny Weismuller, either. When Johnny played Tarzan of the apes he didn't have any more wardrobe than a chimp.

He swung through the trees wearing a leopard skin evening gown. We admit that Johnny has a magnificent physique, and so will Johnny, we suspect. And that's why the girls are hollering for the men to wear tops. They are afraid that one of us handsome lads will win one of their beauty contests.

We will not be thoroughly capable of deciding on this tops or no tops thing until we see W. C. Fields bathing with just the bottoms. That should be a sight that will ring the highest bell in the chimes of Normandy. Until then, we shall lurk under our folded umbrella.

The Constitution Defied

A Bar Association Committee Questions Some of the Policies of the New Deal

The American Bar Association's committee on administrative law has made a report, which may become historical, on certain aspects of the New Deal that affect the rights and liberties of the average citizen.

The report is to be presented to the annual meeting of the association in Milwaukee this month.

Conceding that the emergency and its necessities may justify unusual delegations of power to the Executive, the report reviews at length the extent—the dangerous extent—to which a drilled and cowed Congress has gone in merging executive, legislative and judicial powers, in defiance of the Constitution's mandate that they should be kept separate and distinct.

This is no abstruse question. Its bearing on our lives and security is not remote, but immediate and direct.

We should not listlessly turn away from it as mere theory, or—to use a word with which the brain-trusters dispose of criticism they cannot answer—as "unreal."

It IS REAL in the utmost sense of the word. It represents the difference between tyranny and liberty.

As James Madison said, who with Washington, Jefferson and Hamilton bore a great part in drafting the Constitution:

"An elective despotism is NOT the government we fought for, but one, founded on free principles, in which the powers of government should be so divided and balanced that no one can transcend their legal limits without being checked and restrained by the others."

He maintained that no political truth is of greater intrinsic value or stamped with the authority of more enlightened patrons of liberty, than that the accumulation of all powers, legislative, executive and judicial, in the same hands, may justly be pronounced the very definition of tyranny.

Yet—what do we see?

Every one of the almost innumerable "recovery" agencies is daily emitting pronouncements and rulings which have the effect of law and provide the most startling and excessive penalties for their violation.

One of these agencies alone, the NRA, within the short space of a single year, has been responsible for more than 10,000 printed pages of such "legislation." This exceeds in extent the printed volumes of all federal statutes.

No one, not even the most diligent lawyer, is able to ascertain the law applicable to a given state of facts, and the presumption that everyone knows the law, becomes as meaningless as the attempt of the average citizen to understand his government is hopeless.

These hastily thrown together, but enveloping and far reaching, agencies have arrogated to themselves not only legislative functions but judicial functions as well.

They make the law. They interpret and execute the law. And they impose penalties for its infraction.

Our courts are in effect superseded. The aggrieved citizen has little to gain by resorting to them.

His hard won and ancient privileges, which have full legal sanction, are overborne. Long before his suit for protection or his petition for redress can reach the court, his business may be swallowed up, his rights struck down, his capital destroyed—by one of these innumerable administrative agencies, exercising nothing less than a combination of the legislative, executive and judicial powers of government.

Aggravating this irresponsible trampling under of established rights, and rendering it even more serious, is the fact that most of the functionaries who sit upon these administrative tribunals are without any pretense to judicial training or understanding.

And yet they judge.

They proceed with no regard to the safeguards which human experience has shown to be essential to all judicial inquiries—in fact, a very part of them. Rules of evidence are ignored. The irrelevance and immateriality of evidence are not understood, and the competence of witnesses and testimony is not insisted upon.

Effective judicial review of administrative decisions is practically eliminated. In fact, the judgments rendered are so far reaching and immediately destructive that little would be gained from their review.

That the American Bar Association recognizes the gravity of this innovation upon the customary law and our familiar conduct under it, is a source of satisfaction.

Its discussion by the nation's lawyers is timely and will be followed throughout the country with deep interest.

Prudishness Gone Mad

If Not Checked, the Current Tendency Will Take All the Joy Out of Swimming

It is against sound public policy to permit "fan dances" a la Sally Rand on the stage. But it is a far cry from a public, commercial exhibition of nudity to the semi-nudity of a little boy who goes swimming clad only in bathing trunks. And persons who are unable to distinguish the difference are unfit to be entrusted with the regulation of public morals.

These remarks are prompted by the action of the authorities at one of the public swimming pools in expelling from the pool a 9-year-old youngster who was thus attired. Is it possible that there is anyone who would be shocked, or even embarrassed, at the sight of the torso of a little boy?

If the current tendency of the police is not checked, the first thing you know they will be putting us back in the bathing suits of the nineties and taking all the joy out of swimming.

A Sorely Needed Bridge

The Proposed Homestead Span Will Relieve Traffic Congestion and Promote Safety

The controversy over the Liberty Tube toll has diverted attention from other features of the county's public works program. It is a pleasure to be reminded of some of the benefits. We have such a reminder in the announcement of a public meeting to be held tonight to urge early construction of the proposed high-level bridge across the Monongahela River at Homestead.

The bridge is sorely needed. It will do away with dangerous grade crossings and relieve the pressure on Brown's Bridge, an obsolete structure, built in 1895, but still used by 13,000 autos and trucks and 407 street cars every day.

Marry Go Round

By Helen Rowland

Hints to the Bride

Marriage is a voyage of discovery; and after the honeymoon, you will soon discover—

* * *

That the two happiest moments in a woman's day are when she hears her husband's key in the latch in the evening—and when she hears the door click behind him in the morning.

* * *

That a man's charming manners, blue eyes and brilliant mind may be the things you fell in love with, but that it's his little peculiarities and his DISPOSITION you'll have to live with.

* * *

That, as a brilliant woman said long ago, "Being a wife means being a mother to a human being whom you permit to treat you like a child."

* * *

That, once, the supreme struggle of a girl's life was getting a husband; but in these days of chemical blondes, freebooters and love pirates, it's holding ONTO one after you've got him.

* * *

That marriage seems to make a man so utterly helpless that he can't even sugar his own grapefruit or dry his own safety razor, and loses the strength to lift anything around the house except his voice.

* * *

That the fact that he is 20 minutes late, never, NEVER means that your husband has been mangled under a taxicab. Most men are chronically 20 minutes late.

That the average man never TELLS a woman anything—and when it comes to explaining anything, a mummy is chatty beside him.

* * *

That a girl slips into the role of wife as easily as she slips into a bungalow apron; but making a husband out of a bachelor is a labor of skill, love, art, science and time.

* * *

That lots of men may never have had adenoids, falling arches or appendicitis, but there probably never lived a man who did not have an occasional grouch, and go into the silence without warning.

* * *

That the man you married was already wedded to business, golf, fishing or his lodge—and you are only the co-respondent.

* * *

LISTEN, WORLD

Should Wives Tag Along?

Now, mind you, I've nothing against wives per se; nor do I object to them as business associates—when they've qualified. But do you, or don't you, mind mixing with the missis when you're trying to put over a deal with the old man?

For example, this morning I needed to buy a pair of shoes in a rush. Went into my favorite shop on the way to the train. Well known shop. They've always had snappy service. But today, who should barge up but a fat, amiable old dame of around fifty-six, who looked as if she'd had spent her life mixing ginger cookies, wasn't there a regular clerk? Yes, indeed; but she was managing ladies' shoes now, she assured me.

Well, you know how it is. You don't want to hurt people's feelings. So I told her quickly what I wanted, said I'd have to hurry, and sat down. And she began to flutter and putter aimlessly around the shoe shelves.

Minutes passed. Trains don't wait. I fidgeted. Seeing this the proprietor, a friendly old chap of sixty, ambled over.

"It's the missis," he smiled, half apologetically, but evidently sure that this explanation would fix things jake. "She thinks she's going to make a shoe clerk of herself. You see, it's lonesome for her now, since the children've grown, so she likes to stay around here with me; and she says it makes her happier to be doing a little something."

At this moment the old lady trotted over with a pair of shoes. Outside of the fact that they were the wrong size, last and color, they were swell dogs. When I mentioned these facts she looked slightly affronted. "Oh, very well!"

"Yes, I know they aren't exactly what you said," she snapped, "but I thought they'd look real nice on you."

She toddled. More minutes passed. And more. She reappeared with brown pumps. But I wanted black oxfords. "Oh," more fumbling. Well, here was an awful nice pair of black and white sports shoes. Wouldn't these do? No? Oh, then maybe I'd seen those gray suedes. Personally, she thought gray suedes suited me better than black oxfords. Didn't I want to try—

I didn't argue the point. Time was up, and I departed new-shoeless, leaving an aggrieved pair of old faces staring after me. Now, why had I been so rude and fussy? Wasn't she doing her very best to please me? Yes, she probably was. But I ask you—

SHOULD POPPA HANG A NUISANCE LIKE THAT ON AN OLD CUSTOMER JUST BECAUSE MOMMA DOESN'T WANT TO STAY HOME WHERE SHE BELONGS?

That's only one case. You could name dozens more. Real estate agents, insurance men, young lawyers, automobile salesmen,—you drop in on them or they drop in on you, and there's the missis. Just sitting around, of course, friendly and sociable, but listening to every word you say, and nearly always putting in her two cents.

Yes, I know the argument. He's a swell guy and she's a swell girl, and he thought he might as well bring her along for a little ride, and isn't it great to see a young couple so fond of each other? It is, indeed. But what has that to do with business?

Why should you have to make your financial transactions a community matter because they're in love?

He'd "trust her with anything he knows?" That, too, is delightful. But how about YOUR feelings?

However, maybe you can talk nicer. So if you have an opinion on this subject, send it in. A lot of peeved poppas and mad mommas will want to read it.

ISN'T IT SO?

A diplomat is a man who can make his wife think that he is doing her a favor when he accepts part of the week's wages he turned over to her the night before.

Will Rogers Says:

HONOLULU, Aug. 3.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

With Dollfuss, the conservative, gone, and that fine level headed old patriot Von Hindenberg gone it looks like it takes a radical to live. England saying that her borders reached to the Rhine was good news to these islands for that means that our's at least reach our own possessions. The Army and Navy ought to be flying this hop all the time. It's like carrying the mail. We ask em to do something right now and then blame em because they have had no practice. If we ever had to fly here we would have to ask em to postpone the emergency till we learned it. So don't blame the boys. They will have to wait now till commercial lines do it first.

Yours, WILL ROGERS.

Someone To Trust

By Winifred Black

THEY WERE walking along the sidewalk together in the soft glow of the setting sun.

The sea was dancing along the shore like a Russian ballet in full swing. There was a breeze that made a singing harp of every tree along the road, and we sat parked in the roadster watching the world go by.

The two small boys skipped along one on each side of him, trying so hard to take long manly strides and failing rather touchingly, it seemed to me.

They had been talking something over, the three boys, and now the big boy settled the whole matter:

"Sure," he said in his queer husky voice—"sure".

Big boy, I thought, what would you give a few years from now to have somebody worship you as you are worshiped now?

"Sure"—how sure they all were.

Why, there was no question about it at all. Big boy said it was "sure," whatever it was, and that was that, and no more worry about it.

Don't you wish you had someone who could say, "sure" like that and make you believe it, when you begin to feel a little uncomfortable about life or death or whatever?

I wonder if that wasn't what made grandma look so peaceful and contented.

She didn't have a thing to worry her—not a thing at all. Do you remember the time they had the Indian scare up in Wisconsin and all the neighbors crowded into their wagons and their queer old buggies and phaetons and ran away?

"You won't be gone long," she cried, and when they asked her if she wasn't afraid to stay, she laughed:

"Why, don't you suppose Jeffery would have let me know if there was any danger?" said grandma.

Jeffery was her young husband, far away in the front ranks in the war, but that made no difference to grandma.

She went through life that way, and most of the time she was right.

Her Jeffery did look after her—and why should she waste her time worrying about his business?

It would be sort of nice to have a Jeffery to believe and trust, wouldn't it, honestly, now?

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

COLLEGE women make the worst wives if we are to take the observations and studies of Dr. D. P. Wilson, of Los Angeles, at full value. There is, however, one authority who disagrees with him, the same being Judge Joseph Sabath, of Chicago, and if you ask him, his reply is:

"No, it is not the intelligent woman who makes the worst wife. That doubtful honor goes to the woman who is beautiful but dumb."

In the midst of their discussion Judge Lee E. Skeel, of the Court of Common Pleas in Cleveland, makes the observation that better times seem to bring along with them the disruption of more marriages than a depression does. This judge says:

* * *

Divorce Law Causes Premier to Resign

THE resignation of the Prime Minister of Peru because of the passage of a divorce law in that country, and the cases of Elliot and Anna Roosevelt are other current items of news which are focusing attention on the age old question of divorce.

While the number of divorces have increased astoundingly in the last quarter of a century, divorce itself is nothing new. It goes back far into antiquity and is recognized in the Old Testament, there being a passage in Deuteronomy which prescribes the circumstances under which a husband may hand his spouse a bill of divorcement.

It is practised today all over the world with the exception of one or two Latin American countries and some primitive tribes of Ceylon and the Malay Peninsula. And the causes and methods are as many as the imagination can conjure up, from the many divorces of Mexico to the law of the natives of Central Africa which permits the wife to sever the bond when the husband fails to sew the little clothes which the fashions of the equatorial zone dictate.

The United States and Russia are the No. 1 countries in the matter of volume. Russia's figures are not available, but it is doubtful if even they exceed the American rate which is about one divorce for every six marriages. Yearly figures over here for the depression were in the neighborhood of 180,000, whereas during the boom times they passed 200,000 mark for a year. As against the 165 divorces per 100,000 population of the United States, England shows but eight and one-half, and this despite the fact that the comparatively few cases among our foreign born pulls down the figures for the native stock. Divorce in England happens to be a costly luxury.

* * *

Chief Causes Of Complaint

THE American woman outnumbers the man three to one in asking for a severance of the tie which is supposed to bind. Her chief causes of complaint are cruelty and neglect and, of course, in many states, she can sue for non-support, which is not grounds for the male. The laxer the laws, the more divorces, as is evidenced by a comparison of Reno with New York state, which are two extremes.

For every divorce granted in New York State, Reno can show about 115. All over the country the statistics show that the largest number of divorces are granted to persons who have been married from 10 to 15 years. Dr. Alfred Cohan, of Columbia University, makes the interesting note that childless marriages are the ones which usually go on the rocks, with only eight per cent of the divorces in this country involving families where there is a child.

Judge Sabath in Chicago, who has granted 38,000 divorces in 13 years while reconciling 2,700 couples in that same period, believes that if there were less haste in marriage there would be fewer break ups. And for longer and happier marriages, he offers this advice from his long and vast experience:

"To the husband: Take your wife into your confidence and discuss all your problems with her. At the same time supply her with sufficient cash to run the home comfortably. To the wife: Do not be afraid to soil your hands. Do not be afraid of motherhood. Do not make fun and tease your husband with idle flirtations. Make him assume the responsibilities of your home life in co-operation with you."

Growth of Spoils System Danger to Democrats

By James T. Williams, Jr.

IN spite of the alarming extension of the spoils system under the Roosevelt administration—due chiefly to the fact that the chairman of the Democratic National Committee is also Postmaster General and dictator over all federal patronage—Democratic Congressmen in a number of states are encountering formidable opposition for renomination.

It was predicted on this page last May that four of the nine members of the Oklahoma delegation in the Seventy-third Congress were in danger of defeat for renomination in the Democratic primaries. Three have been defeated for renomination and the fourth declined to be a candidate because he feared defeat.

One of the reasons for this upset in Oklahoma was the general dissatisfaction over the dispensing of federal patronage under the spoils system. Not only were those who failed to get on the payroll dissatisfied, but the general public was resentful of the incompetency of many of the appointees to whom the federal jobs were given in reward for political activity.

Alabama and Illinois are other states in which Democratic candidates for Congress have been denied renomination in spite of the fact that they boasted of their support of President Roosevelt and were liberally supplied with patronage by the Chairman-Postmaster General. And at this writing only 17 of the 48 states have yet held their primaries.

* * *

People Weary Of Spoils System

THIS is not a bad sign, except for the spoilsmen of politics. For the general public it is a most encouraging sign. It indicates that even the rank and file of the party in power are getting weary of the iniquitous system under which the political parasites on the payroll of our obsolete system of county and local government are trading their support of senatorial and congressional candidates for federal offices for their heelers.

It indicates also that Senators and Representatives in Congress who betray the public interest by auctioning off the federal offices at their disposal to the highest political bidder are running foul of a growing public sentiment against the spoils system.

President Roosevelt can halt the raid on the merit system by the spoilsmen of politics whenever he makes up his mind to suit the action of the President to the word of the presidential candidate. As a candidate for President and before that as Governor of New York, as the Democratic nominee for Vice President and in the days when he was a progressive member of the New York Legislature Mr. Roosevelt was a champion of civil service reform. From these assurances of his belief in the merit system of appointment and his abomination of the spoils system the American people had every reason to believe that as President, Mr. Roosevelt would make a record that would favorably compare with that of Grover Cleveland as a champion of the merit system.

Farley's Jobs Are In Conflict

NOR have Mr. Roosevelt's supporters altogether abandoned hope that he will yet give battle to the spoilsmen. This he cannot effectively do, however, until he compels Mr. Farley to give up either the office of Postmaster General or the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee. The two offices are in conflict. It was never intended that they should be held by the same man.

The Postmaster General is supposed to devote his entire time to the administration of that important office. He cannot do that if he is at the same time functioning as chairman of the national committee of his party and dictating to the other members of the cabinet and the heads of the independent agencies of the federal government whom they shall recommend to the President for appointment to all of the thousands of federal offices at his disposal.

And until the Roosevelt administration takes the field under the leadership of the President for the extension of the merit system throughout the federal service Mr. Roosevelt cannot be of much assistance to those progressive Democrats and Republicans in more than 3,000 counties throughout the United States who are struggling to throw off the yoke of ox-cart government.

Ox-cart government in every state in the Union is maintained by the spoils system. To get rid of ox-cart government, the people must first be emancipated from the rule of officeholders who owe their place on the payroll of government to the ox-cart drivers—the county rings and the local bosses whom the Chairman-Postmaster General of the Roosevelt administration is organizing into one vast army under his command.

Every time a Democratic Congressman is defeated in the primaries of his own party for renomination because he has betrayed the public interest in permitting ox-cart politicians to determine his recommendations for federal appointment, the people strike a blow against the spoils system and against the ox-cart system of county and local government. The example of Oklahoma might well be followed by other states in the primaries yet to be held.
